ADMIRALTY IN DARK ON NAVAL BATTLE

London, Nov. 5.—The Admiralty has issued a statement in which it says it has received from German sources details of a naval engagement off the Chilean coast in which the British cruiser, Monmouth, was sunk and the cruiser Good Hope severely damaged. The statement says that the Admiralty has no confirmation of the report.

The statement, issued through the Official Press Bureau in the name of the Secretary of the Admiralty, is as follows:

"Rumors and reports have been received at the Admiralty from various sources of a naval battle having occurred off the Chilean coast. The Admiralty has no confirmation of this, and such accounts as they have received rest admittedly on German evidence.

"It is reported that the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Leipzig, Dresden and Nurnberg concentrated near Valparaiso, and that an engagement was fought with a portion of Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock's squadron on Sunday last. The German report asserts that the Monmouth was sunk and the Good Hope very severely damaged. The Glasgow and the auxiliary cruiser Otranto broke from the action and escaped.

CANNOT ACCEPT THEM AS FACTS

"The Admiralty cannot accept these facts as accurate at present, for the battleship Canopus specially was sent to strengthen Rear-Admiral Cradock's squadron, and would have given him a decided superiority. Further, although five German ships concentrated in Chilean waters, only three entered Valparaiso harbor. It is possible, therefore, that when the full account of the action is received it may considerably modify the German version. Effective measures have been taken to deal with the situation in any event."

THREE REPORTED ESCAPED.

Washington, Nov. 4.—American Minister Fletcher at Santiago, Chile, today, reported the naval engagement off Coronel, Chile, and the arrival of three German warships at Valparaiso. The damaged British cruiser Good Hope is reported as having escaped with the Glasgow and the Otranto.

Canadians Please the Royal Visitors

Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plain, Nov. 4.—Accompanied by a number of staff officers and attendants, King George and Queen Mary to-day inspected the Canadian expeditionary force at Bustard Camp, and delighted the Canadians with their expressions of admiration and the informal manner in which they conversed with different members of the contingent. Accompanying their Majesties was Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, who frequently remarked that the showing of the Canadians was "Splendid! Magnificent!"

German Cruiser Sunk ; Another Disabled

London, Nov. 5, 4.09 a.m.—The German cruiser York has struck a mine in Jahde Bay and sunk. Of the crew 382 were saved.
The information regarding the loss of the York reached London in an Amsterdam despatch to the Reuter's Telegram Company. It stated that an official despatch from Berlin said that the York, on the forenoon of November 4, struck a mine chain blocking the entrance to Jahde Bay and sank.

Allies Hold Firm Their Battle Line

Amsterdam (via London), Nov. 4.—A despatch to the Telegraaf from Sluis says:
"Heavy gun firing is heard in the triangle of Dixmude, Roulers and Ypres, indicating that a severe battle is raging in that neighborhood.
It is believed that the Germans now will attempt to break through the allies lines there and force their way by the Ypres to Dunkirk, but that they will find it very difficult to cross the morasses in the vicinity of the Upper Yser caused by the inundation."

British Bombard Red Sea Town

London, Nov. 4.—The British cruiser Minerva has bombarded the Arabian town of Jeddah on the Red Sea.
Jeddah, a town of some 30,000 inhabitants, is the chief seaport of Arabia, in the province of Hejaz, sixty-five miles northwest of Mecca. In the northern part of the town is a tomb said to be that of Eve. Nearly half the population is Arab.
A Central News despatch from Berlin says that large Turkish forces assembled on the Asiatic side of the Suez Canal, intend to blow up that waterway and form a dam with bags of sand as soon as the Turkish army advances on Egypt.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the Daughters of the Empire.

MUFFLERS FOR LADY FRENCH.
All our knitters desiring to send mufflers to England for the War Office authorities, asked for by Lady French are urged to concentrate their efforts for the time being on this work, as the mufflers must be turned in by Saturday afternoon, November 17th, at the Committee room. Directions for knitting same and wool may be obtained of the ladies in charge, also any members of the committee can furnish directions. It is desired to make a special effort to meet this demand.

BELGIAN RELIEF.
Notwithstanding the fact that the ship of mercy, the "Termovah," has sailed for England, carrying succor so sorely needed to the distressed Belgians, still more must follow, in order to relieve the terrible destitution; therefore ships bearing relief will constantly leave Canada. The above committee will consequently gladly receive all further donations, whether of clothing for men, women and children, portable foods or financial aid, all of which is urgently needed.

In the case of cast-off clothing being sent in, it should be cleaned and in good condition. That for young children is much desired.

Since our last public acknowledgment was made the Committee desire to thank most heartily several friends for very substantial financial aid, also Messrs. Boyle & Son, and Mr. Charles Walters for kind assistance rendered, as well as others interested in our work.

Our Thursday work meetings, when various matters can be discussed over the tea-cups, seem to be increasingly popular, judged by the gratifying attendance and results and the interest manifested. These meetings will continue weekly.

It has been decided that the Committee-room shall be open on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons, from 2 to 5.30 o'clock.

French Are Advancing Steadily In the Vosges and Heavy Batteries Are Taken In Mountain Passes—Tremendous German Attacks on Dixmude-Lys Line Fail—Flooding of Land Stops Kaiser's Advance.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—While wa clouds hung heavy over the Balkan and the Mediterranean yesterday, furious contests took place all along the allied front from the channel to Switzerland, with particularly notable victories to the French arms in the Vosges. With snow falling and bitter winds blowing, the armies of the republic are wrestling one position after another from the German grasp in this mountain range. Versines d Sainte Marie is the latest fruit of victory. A late despatch says that several passes where the Germans have mounted heavy batteries were taken yesterday. It is claimed that the French not only captured the guns of the invaders, but have brought up number of 75 millimetre pieces and succeeded in shelling the Germans as they fell back.

It is authoritatively stated that the Kaiser's forces were decisively beaten in a series of violent assaults on the Franco-British front from Dixmude to the River Lys. The Germans delivered tremendous attack on the allied trenches and after losing thousands as the result of especially accurate French artillery fire the French and British turned their back with the bayonet.

Despite all hammering the Germans continue to hold positions on the allied side of the Yser and are stubbornly contesting every effort to dislodge them. But the cutting of the dykes by the Belgians has effectively stopped any effort of the enemy to advance further. All of the field in the country bounded by Nieupo and Dixmude are under several feet of water and Belgian troops, supported by their own very effective artillery and numerous batteries from the French and British armies, are posted along the railroad and electric road embankments, on the highways an every high spot of ground. To advance, the Germans must come up narrow routes a few feet wide. Such a target as their masses would offer in operations of this character could mean nothing less than utter annihilation for the foe.

West of Nieupo to the coast, the country is free of Germans and the allied fleet continues to frustrate every effort of the Kaiser's men to pierce this country. It is said on good authority that the allies are now within four miles of Ostend and can take that town at their leisure, as it is defended by only a handful of the foe.

A courier bearing despatches to the Duke of Wurtemberg, from the Kaiser, has been captured. Unless Ypres was taken by Nov. 1, said the German War Lord, the invaders must fall back. He bid the duke exert every means within his power to carry the town.

The outskirts of Arras were reached yesterday by an advancing column of the foe before a heroic charge drove them back several miles. Bloody conflicts have taken place around Lille, which appears to have been vacated by the Germans. The situation is very confused in this region and little can be accurately told. Following a previous defeat at Amont-de-Vailly the French have won a success of considerable importance. North of the Meuse, French forces

cusses To Report.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—The following report from the General Staff of the Russian commander-in-chief was made public here last night:

"On the front in Eastern Prussia our troops have repulsed German attacks directed against Vladizlavoff, driven the enemy from the eastern edge of the Rominten Forest and advanced to the north of Lake Ralgorod.

"Beyond the Vistula our troops continue the offensive without being opposed. Only in the region of Opatow the Austrians attempted to resist us with considerable forces. They were repulsed. Beyond the Opatow river the Austrians hold a fortified position.

"In Galicia, on the San river, our troops entered the Village of Nisko, where fierce fighting took place.

"On the rest of the front the situation is virtually unchanged."

The military correspondent of The Novoe Vremya, explaining the changing disposition of the enemy's forces, says:

"The Austrians are moving south and southwest toward the west Galician frontier and Cracow, while the Germans, retreating from Warsaw, are falling back west and southwest toward the Silesian frontier. As the Russian troops from Warsaw and Novoe Georgiewsk follow the Germans, the Russian East Prussian corps is moving in force on the regions northwest of Warsaw, covering Warsaw from the direction of Mlaw and occupying both banks of the Vistula below Warsaw."

SINGING CLUBS ARM?

They Are Preparing to Attack Canada Declares U. S. Railwayman.

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—The stories that the Germans of the United States are contemplating a raid on Canada have been given emphasis by a letter received by William Galbraith, former mayor of Westmount. The letter, which came from the vice-president of one of the biggest railways in the Western States, said:

"I overheard a conversation last night on a steamboat going from Norfolk to Richmond. It was between Germans, and to the effect that all the German singing societies, which are 500,000 strong, are carrying on a propaganda of secret arming and other arrangements for the purpose of attacking Canada from this side."

Statue of Carnegie Pelted.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A despatch to a news agency from Dunfermline, Scotland, says that local sentiment against Andrew Carnegie because of his alleged pro-German attitude is so strong that the statue of Mr. Carnegie, which was erected by the citizens of his native town last June, was pelted by a crowd.

German War Lord, the invaders must fall back. He bid the duke exert every means within his power to carry the town.

The outskirts of Arras were reached yesterday by an advancing column of the foe before a heroic charge drove them back several miles. Bloody conflicts have taken place around Lille, which appears to have been vacated by the Germans. The situation is very confused in this region and little can be accurately told. Following a previous defeat at Amont-de-Vailly the French have won a success of considerable importance.

North of the Meuse, French forces have driven the Germans further back. To the east, around Ban d Sapt, a number of high points have been taken depriving the Germans of artillery bases that commanded several towns, including St. Die. This is regarded as a victory of much value.

The communiqué of the Belgian Government, issued from Havre, lay great stress on the fact that Pelka pelle has been surrounded. This gives the allies command of road leading to Dixmude, Ypres, Rouler and Thourout. The Belgians also rejoice over the compulsory evacuation by the Germans of Rasmacapelle which they held in part. Many prisoners were taken, says the statement, and the Germans thrown back of an important railway line.

It is reported, the despatch adds, that the allies Sunday occupied Leffinghe, on the Ostend-Nieuport Canal, which, if true, means that the Germans suffered a heavy defeat.

New German Army.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Information has reached here showing that the recently raised new German army has a total strength of 580,000 men, and is made up principally by calling out the recruits of 1915. The remainder are volunteers of all ages. The army is divided into twelve corps, and will be used as follows: Six corps for service in Belgium and France; two to form a reserve force, and stationed around Strassburg, and the other four to be employed in a special effort to take Verdun.

Germans Will Win Says Kaiser.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—(Via London.)—In addressing the Brandenburg Regiment in France recently at a point behind the front, Emperor William closed his speech with these words:

"When the war is finished we should see each other again. Under all circumstances the enemy will be beaten."

This information is conveyed in a letter received in Berlin from the front.

Battle In the Straits.

LONDON, Nov. 3. — Heavy firing was heard off the foreland at Dove yesterday afternoon. Twelve live shells were fired in rapid succession. The concussion rattled windows a Deal. A British torpedo boat destroyer could be seen outside Goodwin sands, and it was surmised that the British ship had attacked a German submarine, which was known to be in the Channel.

APOLOGY TOO LATE?

Turkey's Effort to Avoid War Has Not Succeeded.

If Peace Party In Turkish Cabinet Has Secured the Upper Hand the Ottoman Empire May Recede on Original Terms Offered by Allies—Goeben Driven Off Sebastopol—Turks Are Raiding Egypt.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—An unconfirmed news agency despatch from Constantinople says that the Grand Vizier has tendered an apology for recent events in the Black Sea. To whom this apology was made is unknown. The British and Russian Ambassadors are said to have left the city Sunday night for Salonica, and the French diplomatic representative has arranged to make his departure to-day. It is also problematical as to whether such an apology has been made to Russia alone or to France and her allies. If the peace party in the Turkish Ministry has prevailed it means that Turkey can only recede from her perilous position by complying with all of the articles in the ultimatum of the Triple Entente, delivered a few days ago. The chief points involved are the disarmament of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, "bought" from Germany, and the immediate discharge of all German officers in the Ottoman army and navy.

The Turkish Ambassador here, Tewfik Pasha, was given his passports yesterday, and the same applies to the Sultan's diplomatic agent at Petrograd. Similar action was expected at Bordeaux.

Despite the patience of the Triple Entente with Turkey and their willingness that the peace party in her Cabinet should extricate her from a position obviously the work of German agents, it was stated last night in an authoritative quarter that Turkey will have to do much more than apologize. The departure of the Ministers from Constantinople and of the Turkish diplomats here and at Petrograd indicate that the Grand Vizier's belated peace efforts have failed.

Simultaneously with the report of an apology by the Sultan comes a despatch from Athens, which says that the Turkish gunboat Dubakreis and the Turkish armed steamer Kinallada have been sunk in the Gulf of Techachme.

That the vessels have been lost is indicated by conflicting statements as to the means by which they were sunk. It is known that the Franco-British fleet entered the Gulf of Techachme yesterday morning, and one message says that the allied warships caught up with and destroyed the Turkish craft. Another report from Ottoman sources declares that the commanders of the vessels blew them up when the allied fleet appeared on the horizon.

That the cruiser Goeben has been driven off from the attempted bombardment of Sebastopol is the information contained in a cablegram from that famous fortress, at whose gates nearly every nation of Europe has hammered with small success. This message says that the guns of the Constantinowskaya battery compelled the Goeben to retire. Shortly afterwards a wireless was intercepted from the big battle cruiser, saying: "Damaged; will return to Constantinople for repairs."

Out of a mass of disconnected reports emerges the fact that Turkish gunboats have moved from the Red Sea into the Gulf of Suez and that Turkish soldiers have already started

Second Canadian Contingent Will Complete Another Army Division.

OTTAWA, Nov. 3. — The second Canadian contingent will be a complete army division, and its strength will be over 15,000 men. One of the four brigades of infantry now in England will be part of the second contingent.

Advices received from the British War Office yesterday indicated what in its opinion should be the composition of the second Canadian force.

The following official statement was issued by the Militia Department yesterday afternoon:

"There has been received from the British Government a despatch to the effect that the Army Council wish the second overseas contingent to be so organized that in conjunction with one of the four brigades of Canadian infantry already in England it will form a division complete in itself as far as possible, with in addition a due proportion of army service corps units for duty on lines of communication."

"The contingent will accordingly consist of two brigades of infantry (eight battalions), a complement of artillery, engineer, cyclist, signal, and administrative units (army service corps and field ambulances) and the following units for line of communication purposes: Divisional ammunition park, field bakery, field butchery, railway supply detachment, and two depot units of supply.

 that famous fortress, at whose gates nearly every nation of Europe has hammered with small success. This message says that the guns of the Constantinowskawa battery compelled the Goeben to retire. Shortly afterwards a wireless was intercepted from the big battle cruiser, saying:
 "Damaged; will return to Constantinople for repairs."

Out of a mass of disconnected reports emerges the fact that Turkish gunboats have moved from the Red Sea into the Gulf of Suez and that Turkish soldiers have already started a formidable raid into Egypt from Sinal. Their objective is plainly the Suez Canal. British forces are well prepared to halt this raid, and both French and British warships command every point on the Mediterranean from which the 300,000 Turkish troops mobilized on the Syrian coast can be transported to the Sinai Peninsula.

It is reliably reported that 400,000
 Ottomans are concentrated at a point near the Caucasus for a quick blow at Russia. But the Czar has not been caught unawares, and a force estimated variously at from 500,000 to 1,000,000 men is within a few days' march of all strategic points by which the Turks might enter. In addition, there is no harder soldier in the world than the natives of the Caucasus, who have fought the Turk for centuries. It is also interesting to note that of the 13,000,000, or 14,000,000 Mahomedtan subjects of the "Little White Father" in the Caucasian zone, practically every one is expected to remain loyal. German and Austrian efforts to spread a "holy war" propaganda have failed here, as they did in India. The situation is thoroughly comforting from all angles as concerns the likelihood of dangerous Turkish aggression in this quarter.

During Sunday Turkish warships again bombarded Odessa and also flung a number of shells into Anapa, at the extremity of the Caucasus. The Breslau and Goeben led the second naval assault on Odessa, supported by four Turkish torpedo boats.

The attack on Anapa is believed to have been in the nature of a signal to the Caucasian Mahomeddians, whom, it was hoped by the Germans and the war party at Constantinople, would rally on the Crescent and slay their Russian neighbors. The uprising failed to eventuate, and the Mo-hommedan leaders and newspapers along Russia's southern border de-claim against Turkish action, swearing fealty to the Czar.

VESUVIUS IS ACTIVE.

Great Alarm Occasioned by Eruption of Volcano.

NAPLES, Nov. 3. — Mount Vesu-vius is again in eruption and the inhabitants in its vicinity have become greatly alarmed. On Sunday special prayers were made and processions of people went to favored shrines as a repetition of the disaster of 1906 is feared.

The activity of the volcano first manifested itself by deep detonations and rumblings. This was followed by gigantic columns of smoke and soon thereafter an abundant eruption of lava began.

The last serious eruption of Mount Vesuvius occurred in the spring of 1906. Several villages were destroyed and the property loss was estimated at $20,000,000. About 500 persons were killed and 50,000 made homeless.

CANADIANS FOR EGYPT?

New Phase of War May Draw Some of Second Contingent There.

OTTAWA, Nov. 3.—Full instructions concerning the composition of the second Canadian contingent, have been received from the War Office.
 There may be some further negotiations. It is understood that the instructions are given on the supposition that the second force will comprise a full division of at least 22,000 men, of which the 16,000 men now being enlisted will form the infantry branch, but it is not considered that the same amount of artillery will be provided.

It is considered probable, in view of the situation which has developed in the Near East, that some Canadians may see service in Egypt. The recent massing of Turkish troops in the vicinity of that country may be the cause of drawing certain units thither.

Ceremonious They Are With Their Bows and Speeches.

In Sir Ernest Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic" there is a chapter by James Murray, the biologist of the expedition, on those queer creatures, the penguins. The following is an extract:

"Their resemblance to human beings is always noticed. This is partly due to their habit of walking erect, but there are truly a great many human traits about them. They are the civilized natives of these regions.

"Emperor penguins are very ceremonious in meeting other Emperors or men or dogs. They come up to a party of strangers in a straggling procession, some big, important, aldermanic fellow leading. At a respectful distance from the man or dog they halt, the old male waddles up and bows gravely till his beak almost touches his breast. Keeping his head bowed, he makes a long speech in a muttering manner, short sounds following in groups of four or five. Having finished the speech, the head is still kept bowed a few seconds for politeness' sake, then it is raised, and he looks in your face to see if you have understood. If you have not comprehended, as is usually the case, he tries again. He is very patient with your stupidity.

"Their most solemn ceremonies were used toward the dogs, and three old fellows have been seen calmly bowing and speaking simultaneously to a dog, which, for its part, was yelping and straining at its chain in the effort to get at them."

SAVED HIS WILD GOATS.

Emperor Maximilian Was Lucky In Having a Wise Adviser.

Of the great Emperor Maximilian it is told that once when traveling far from home he wore so sad an expression that a courtier asked him what affairs of state could cause so much concern. The emperor replied it was not the state but ibex he was thinking of. In his absence he feared a certain poacher, whom he mentioned by name, would make havoc with the herds. Could the courtier propose any preventive?

The astute person thus addressed immediately suggested a letter to the poacher's wife, signed and sealed by the imperial hand and offering her the best silk dress that could be obtained if the emperor's wild goats were not touched during his absence. And such, alas, is the influence of the sex that history hints the bribe was more effectual than "all the king's horses and all the king's men" in the way of forest rangers and wood reeves.

Maximilian had a preserve of these animals in the Tyrol near the Aachen sea and has left on record some interesting notes and illustrations of the sport he enjoyed among them. One picture represents him in a boat on a lake assisting to catch an ibex in a large

An Eye to the Future.

The late Wilson Barrett possessed a valuable old dresser who had the good fortune to be built on the same classic lines as Barrett himself, and accordingly inherited his master's cast-off clothes. One day something had upset Barrett at rehearsal, and he lost his temper. Every one stamped out of his way. He strode into his dressing room with flashing eyes, and so indignant did he feel that he incontinently dashed his hat with great violence into the corner of the apartment. The faithful dresser, who knew every mood of his master, was quite unperturbed. He merely exclaimed, in bland tones, but with a touch of reproach:

"Here, steady, gov'nor; I've got to wear that some day!"

WAY OF A TRAIN IN SPAIN.

Even the Expresses Creep Along as Though They Were Weary.

The train this morning is a correo (express), but everything is so new that you feel no more hurried than the train and rather enjoy its ways. It creeps into the station quietly and carefully, as if in fear that some hen might have laid one of those numerous fine Spanish eggs on the track and it might get broken in a too reckless approach. Sometimes—but this doesn't happen frequently—it slows up when near to one of the smallest of the multitudinous stations and sneaks by without stopping, as if ashamed or afraid.

When it does come to a standstill it listlessly slides back a bit and then slides forward a bit and then rights itself once more and then straightens up with a jerk, as if it were tired and its muscles not obedient to will. Then for a few moments every one cautiously waits to see what further it intends.

About the time it is thoroughly stopped some one pulls at the cord attached to the tongue of the station bell and gives three signals to let the passengers—and any one else who may be interested—know that the train has officially arrived, and a station employee calls out, "San Pablo, ocho minutos!" meaning that there will be eight minutes of waiting. —Grant Showerman in Atlantic.

its gardens and glories and converted it into a macaroni factory.

This is the line of the little man who makes kings tremble. Count Enrico Malatesta he has the right to call himself, but that he has never done. His father and uncles were high commanders in the forces of Crown Prince Humbert when Victor Emmanuel drove the Austrians out of Italy. He himself has been openly accused of having instigated the assassination of that same Humbert.

Malatesta is now 61 years old. About forty years ago, when he was a medical student in Naples, he threw off the rank and station to which he was born, and assisted in the fomenting of a Roumanian uprising against Turkey. The Porte hunted him out and he returned to Italy.

In 1899, having been successively expelled from Italy, Turkey, Spain, France, Russia, Germany, Switzerland, and Belgium, and proscribed in every European country save England, he went to the United States at the call of Paterson and Reading radicals to become editor of La Question Sociale in Paterson. First, however, he had to be rescued from a small island off the Tunisian coast, whither Italy had exiled him.

Malatesta lectured for a time in America, was shot in the thigh at one of the Anarchist meetings and saved from death by Gaetano Bresci, who ingratiated himself with the Red leader by the rescue and soon became an intimate.

In 1900 Malatesta went to London and established himself in Soho and Islington. A little later Bresci sailed for Italy with two companions. And then came the news of the assassination of King Humbert. The police have not yet been convinced that the plot to kill the King was not hatched in Paterson by Malatesta.

But a little later Malatesta appeared in Paris. Almost immediately there were two attempts on the life of the Persian Shah, then visiting the French capital. A shot at the French President followed. In Switzerland and Belgium riots attended the visits of Malatesta. In Germany, it was said, his influence brought about an attempt on the Kaiser.

That is the record of this quiet, urbane little Italian. Yet Malatesta is neither a bomb-thrower nor a maker of bombs, though his appearance would suggest that character to the popular mind. He is rather heavily built, swarthy, bearded and intense, with glittering black eyes and nervous, peaceless fingers.

Sinkers and Floaters.

The gentle art of determining the age of eggs has been explained to the heads of all state institutions. Hen fruit that sinks in a 10 per cent. salt solution is fresh; if it remains suspended it is at least three days old, and if it floats is five or more days old. After that it is only a matter of cracking the shell and giving the bird a chance to fly. The salt solution differs from the market in that the lower the eggs the higher the price.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

preached to-day, from the text, "God hath appointed a Day in which He will judge the world in righteousness: by that Man whom He hath ordained." (Acts 17:31.) The Judgment Day, once dreaded by all classes, has been given its true Scriptural signification in the well-known Photo-Drama of Creation.

Before proceeding with his text the Pastor discussed its context. St. Paul was explaining to the Athenians that a death sentence rested upon the whole world; and that consequently it would have been illogical for God to command mankind to repent until first there had been provided a redemption from that penalty. Since the race were already condemned to death, the extreme penalty of the Divine Law, nothing more could be done to them, except to cut short their existence; and nothing they could do would render them worthy of everlasting life. Therefore God justly enough "winked at" their imperfection, not laying it to their charge.

With the Jews, however, it was different. Through their Law and the Prophets God had instructed them, and by means of chastenings or wrong doings had prepared in them "a remnant" of "Israelites indeed," ready for spiritual things. During our Lord's earthly ministry these numbered five hundred, and at Pentecost several thousand more received Him. It is but reasonable to suppose that no other nation would have furnished any such numbers ready of heart to receive Messiah. Note, for instance, that St. Paul's reaching to the Athenians on Mars Hill apparently touched not even one heart or head.

The Gospel Sent to Gentiles.

It was then explained that after our Lord's First Advent a new feature of God's Plan for human salvation began. The Son of God had unveiled Himself to become a man and to die sacrificially, in order to benefit consecrated believers during His Gospel Age and then to bless all mankind during the Millennial Age.

For a time these Good Tidings were confined to the Jews; but three and one-half years after the crucifixion the limit of Israel's favor respecting the Message was reached. Then the Good Tidings of great joy went to the Gentiles on the same terms that Israel had had.

The Gospel, the "good news," consists of the information that God has provided that the death sentence upon Adam and his race shall not be perpetual; that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust"; and that provision for this has already been made in and through the death of the Redeemer.

The word resurrection, as used in scripture, signifies much more than merely an awakening from the tomb, resuscitation. It signifies an uplifting out of all sin and death conditions, up to the perfection lost by our Adam in Eden and redeemed by our Saviour at Calvary.

"God Hath Appointed a Day." This, the Pastor declared, is the meaning of the Apostle's argument, providing the Lord Jesus Christ, the Redeemer God has made possible a fresh trial, or judgment, for Adam and his race. That general

To whatever extent sins were willful, to that extent they will be punishable and receive "a just recompense of reward."

During this Gospel Age God has been selecting a special class and fitting them to be Christ's associate judges. As St. Paul asks the Corinthian Church, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" Their present experiences in battling against the world, the flesh and the Devil, and in coming off more than conquerors through our Lord's assistance will qualify them for judging mankind.

Now is the Judgment Day for this class. They do not stand or fall as congregations, denominations or societies. Theirs is an individual testing; and nothing short of absolute loyalty to God and the principles of righteousness will constitute them worthy of Divine acceptance.

THE DRY BATTERY.

Its Many Uses and the Numerous Processes in Its Making.

That common little object, the dry cell, has played an important part in the advancement of scientific research. There are few articles manufactured that are used in so many ways as the dry battery, yet it is by no means a recent discovery.

The automobile, motorboat, wireless telegraphic apparatus, Christmas tree festoons, electric toys and trains, electric engines, local bell, telephone and annunciator systems, miniature lighting equipments, medical batteries and vibrators, electric alarm clocks, burglar alarms, automatic door openers, safe cracking devices and internal machines in their many forms, devices for setting off dynamite explosions in excavations, the various testing outfits and electric clock service, to say nothing of the divers ways that it is used in scientific experiments, are a few of the most obvious of its applications.

In its manufacture there are about as many processes as are necessary in the making of a tungsten lamp, and the machinery process that makes it and compounds the ingredients that go into it is wonderfully interesting. So exact is the formula placed into each shell that when completed a battery will register up to a uniform amperage. The highest known amperage in the manufacture of a dry cell is twenty-six.

The exact origin of the dry battery is uncertain, many inventors having claimed the honor.—New York World.

Cheap Power.

Natural steam coming up through the ground is a cheap power for running an engine in the northern Tuscany mountains. Lakes of hot water in the vicinity of the steam holes contain much boracic acid, and a manufacturing company uses the natural steam to run machinery for extracting the valuable boracic acid from the lake water. The only difficulty in this pleasant state of affairs is that the steam itself is so highly charged with boracic acid that it would injure the blades of a turbine engine, so the steam is used to heat up an ordinary boiler, and the steam from the boiler is then used in the turbine. The steam is caused by volcanic action and comes up through blowholes at a considerable pressure.—Saturday Evening Post.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, a weak tone developed and prices as compared with this day week showed a decline of 50c per cwt. for steers and 25c for bulls, while cows were unchanged. The bulk of the steers coming forward from Ontario points were contracted for by drovers with farmers and feeders sometime ago at such higher prices than they could be bought for today, and it is claimed that they are losing from $10 to $15 per head. At the above reduction in prices noted the trade in cattle was very slow. A few loads of choice Ontario steers sold at $7.50 to $7.75, and northwest ranch cattle sold at $6.60, while picked lots of choice domestic cows brought $6.75 per 100 pounds. The supply of culling stock was large, and the demand limited, with prices 25c per cwt. lower. Bulls sold at $4.50 to $4.75, and cows at $3.50 to $4.25 per cwt.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for lambs, and prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $4.75 to $5.25; canners, $3.50 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; do., medium, $5.50 to $6; do., bulls, $5.50 to $6.50; milkers, choice, each, $70 to $75; do., common and medium, each, $60 to $65; springers, $50 to $55; sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7 to $7.75; hogs, f.o.b., $8; calves, $5 to $20.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 2.—Cattle—Receipts, 5700; active; prime steers, $9.50 to $10; shipping, $8.50 to $9.25; butchers, $6.75 to $9; heifers, $6 to $8; cows, $3.75 to $7.25; bulls, $5 to $7.35; stockers and feeders, $6 to $7.25; stock heifers, $5 to $5.75.

Veals—Receipts, 1000 head; slow; $5 to $11.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 22,500 head; active; heavy and mixed, $7.70 to $7.75.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Cattle—Receipts 20,000. Market higher. Beves, Texas steers, young steers and stockers and feeders, none offered on account of quarantine. Cows and heifers, $3.80 to $9.40; calves, $7 to $10.25.

Hogs—Receipts 38,000. Market steady. Light, $7.05 to $7.55; mixed, $7.10 to $7.65; heavy, $7.10 to $7.65; rough, $7.10 to $7.20; pigs, $4 to $6.50; bulk of sales, $7.30 to $7.50.

Jews Not Persecuted.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—A semi-official note denies the German allegations that Jews are being persecuted in Poland. The note points out that the war is being conducted by a united Russia, comprising all nationalities without exception.

"Unfortunately, in contravention of article 44 of The Hague convention," says the note, "the enemy's troops operating in Russian territory are exacting from the Jewish population information concerning our army and means of defence, thus making the population liable to inevitable responsibilities."

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. This tree agriculture is nothing new, for many of these orchards are of unknown age, and some of them give evidence of having seen generations of men—rise, dig awhile and die before Columbus sailed past on his way from Genoa to Gibraltar, and throughout all the years that the white man has striven in America these same old olive and carob trees have been standing there, handing down their harvests of fruit and beans to the men who raised other crops at their feet—crops of wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas.—From "Two Story Farming," by J. Russell Smith, in Century.

Make Appearances Count.

A good appearance is always an entering wedge when a man seeks an interview, but all the clothes in a king's wardrobe won't sell a bill of goods. It takes human intelligence to do that. Vanity sometimes leads a fellow to bedeck his person like a five storied wedding cake, and some men do it, I suppose, because they believe in the foolish aphorism that "clothes make the man." It's the other way. Man makes the clothes, and just as often clothes unmake the man. Fine feathers may make fine birds, fine hats or fineusters, but the best that fine clothes ever did was to make fine looking men. No doctor ever prescribes for himself, and by the same token you'll notice that the men who own the clothes foundries don't wear their own styles—not publicly, at any rate.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Sawing the Wood.

It was only on rare occasions that Mrs. Cutler, a kind faced old lady, accepted invitations to dine out. Upon repeated invitations of her friends, the Joslins, however, she consented to attend a little informal dinner they were giving, accompanied by her daughter.

Unfortunately Mrs. Cutler was quite deaf and consequently could not enter into the general conversation. She was engaged in cutting a piece of steak when her daughter turned to her and said:

"Mother, dear, why are you so quiet?"

"I'm all right," responded mother, with a sunny smile. "While you talk, Mabel, I say nothing and saw wood."—Buffalo Express.

Fully Explained.

The colored sexton of a wealthy church had a very stylish mulatto wife. Finding his domestic income not quite equal to his expenses, he decided to apply for an increase in salary. So he wrote a letter to the committee in charge with this explanation at the close: "It's mighty hard to keep a seal-skin wife on a muskrat salary."—New York Sun.

Business as Usual

At the commencement of the present colossal conflict in Europe, one of the best known publicists in the United States hurried across the Atlantic to watch events and to report back to America the effects of the strain on the nations concerned. France and England were the countries in his itinerary. He went to Paris. That delightful centre presented an unusual front to the visitor. The boulevards were deserted; the chairs at the cafe table were unoccupied; trade and mirth were swallowed up in hostile preparations. He went to London. There, the first flurry over, life was as usual. The eye noted a certain restlessness in the street throng, and the ear detected an undertone new to London street traffic, an undertone of singular determination. But the shops were all open. Business was regular and regularly conducted. Britain had gone to war calmly. She was in for good or ill, and recorded her determination to see the thing through. There was no intention on her part to let war interfere unduly with business. The men at the front would do their part fighting the common enemy; the men left at home would do theirs in keeping the wheels of commerce well oiled and in constant motion.

The American was astonished and said so. He felt the pulse of England beat a little faster when the news came from the colonies and self-governing dominions, promising aid in whatever form it might be desired. He pondered over the vision of a worldwide Empire united in spirit, concentrating for war, retaining a close grip upon its worldwide commerce and reaching out for more.

The idea that a country like England could go to war with a highly organized and wholly prepared Germany, without fuss, and shoulder her chosen responsibility of keeping the lusty young dominions overseas supplied with a reasonable amount of development funds, and maintain open trade routes to all parts of the world where her citizens had accustomed themselves to doing business, was regarded as something new in national work. So it is. Yet it is merely England's way of emphasizing the fact that in the great scheme of the Empire of which she is head and front, war is but one problem. By demonstrating that it is only an incident in the general routine of Empire-running she has established more firmly than ever before her commanding position among the nations of the earth.

The most important evidence of the sincerity of this broad British spirit, as far as Canada is concerned, has been given in the provision made for funds enabling the Canadian Northern Railway to continue the prosecution of its transcontinental enterprise. The bankers of Britain, despite the sheltering moratorium, took that decisive action because of their absolute confidence, generally, in the Dominion whose development they have fostered for so many years, and, particularly in the Canadian Northern Railway, with its splendidly located lines, superior grades and developmental administration. As a result, the company has been able to actively continue its construction work, the strain of unemployment has been relieved, and confidence has been restored very largely throughout the country.

As a natural effect of the signing of the Treaty of Berlin it is expected that there will be a marked revival of world interest in Canada; and that the tide of immigration, temporarily suspended because of the conflict in Europe, will set Canada awash again. The war-harassed people of the Old World will set their faces toward the west and Canada, as a result, will

THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The first regular meeting of the eighth season of the Historical Society was held on Friday evening, October 30th. The hall was filled to its capacity when the President called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Warner called special attention to the number of additions to the museum during the summer. The gifts from Mrs. Maud Benson of Picton of utensils used by the pioneers of the Bay of Quinte district which included a warming stove, water bottle, part of an 1812 battle flag, spool, shuttle, reeds, old books and other relics were of special interest as were those from Mr. Robert Longmore of Ernestown. The large spinning wheel given by Mr. Longmore, with the other part of the weaver's outfit were most welcome. The Society is anxious to get a small spinning wheel to help complete the collection. Many photographs of prominent Canadians have been presented and the flags of Belgium, France and Russia add materially to the decorations.

Prof. H. Michell of Queen's University was introduced and for an hour and a half held his audience with a most interesting address on "The Red River Rebellion (1869-1870)." Introducing his subject with the story of Hudson's Bay Company's ownership of all the land between the Great Lakes and British Columbia and its sale of the vast area to the Government of Canada for $1,500,000 two years after Confederation. Prof. Michell explained why the method employed for the occupation of that part of the country about Fort Garry did not suit the half breeds who were squatters on portions of the fur company's lands. Under the leadership of Louis Riel they resisted the occupation of the country and seizing Fort Garry declared themselves as the proprietors, and Riel was chosen as President of the new Government. The events leading to the arrival of Col. Wolsley were graphically described and a description of the subsequent disappearance of Riel and his followers and the peaceful occupation of the country by Canada brought to a close a most delightful and instructive lecture. Prof. Michell illustrated his lecture with portraits of those who took a prominent part in the Rebellion and of the scenes in and about the old fort. His selection of views was most appropriate for the subject and added materially to the interest. He certainly knew his subject and his ideas as to the responsibility for bringing about the trouble and the part taken in the affair by Macdougall, Cartier, Donald Smith, Thomas Scott and Tache were novel and probably in the main correct.

Prof. Michell was thanked by the President for his kindness in coming to Napanee, who expressed the sense of the meeting when he said that another lecture on Canadian history by Prof. Michell would be looked forward to with great interest.

The next meeting was announced on Friday evening, November 27th when Dean Pakenham of the University of Toronto will be the lecturer. His subject will be announced later.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

JUSTICE AND LUNCHEON.

They Seemed to Clash a Trifle, So t Court Made a Change.

It was formerly the practice of the supreme court to sit from 12 noon until 4 o'clock continuously on each day that it was in session. From time to time, as the afternoon progressed, justices, one or two at a time, would slip out of their seats, snatch a bite of luncheon and return. Sometimes many as four or five of them would off the bench at once. They usually had their luncheon brought to them by their messengers and ate it in the little curtained recess behind the bench, as the argument progressed there could be plainly heard in the courtroom the clink of knife and fork on plate as what O. Henry has called "the crash of dishes on the American plan."

One day a lawyer pleading a case made bold to enter a protest. He modestly inquired if he could count upon the continuous and undivided attention of even one justice to the thrust of his argument. "The personnel of the court has been twice entirely changed since I began," he said placidly.

The court deigned no response, but on the following Monday it was announced from the bench that a recess for luncheon thereafter would be taken every day from 2 to 2:30 o'clock at

As a natural effect of the signing of the Treaty of Berlin it is expected that there will be a marked revival of world interest in Canada; and that the tide of immigration, temporarily suspended because of the conflict in Europe, will set Canada-ward again. The war-harassed people of the Old World will set their faces toward the west, and Canada, her own lessons learned, will profit immeasurably by the exchange. Tonnage will return to the railways, and, owing to that, prosperity will accrue to the nation as a whole. It is essential when that time arrives that the transportation systems of the Dominion be completed to the point where they can handle business most expeditiously. The welding together of Canadian Northern steel into a continuous rail highway from Quebec to Vancouver is practically guaranteed by this signal act of British favor, and, as a finished network of lines through the most productive portions in Canada it will take its place in the march of Canadian and Imperial development. The line connecting the industrial east with the agricultural west has already been completed. It is expected that the Pacific coast section—Edmonton to Vancouver—will be linked up by the end of the year.

Birds That Fight Eagles.

In Foula, one of the Shetland Islands, the natives make a business rearing skau gulls in order to rid the islands of eagles that congregate there and commit many depredations. The magnificent red sandstone cliffs that skirt the northwestern coast became a favorite haunt of the eagles, and this inaccessible spot they increased rapidly that they became a terror to the farmers and fishermen who dwelt on this isolated spot. The skau gulls are also strong and fierce and the veteran foes of the eagle. In battle the gulls are nearly always victorious and so the inhabitants of Foula have upon the novel plan of feeding and caring for the skau gulls, which though formidable to their feathered enemies, are very peaceful and docile when brought in contact with man. THE REGENERATION OF CHURCH AND WORLD

Life Everlasting Obtainable Only in Christ.

Why Regeneration Is Necessary— Why It Began at the First Advent and Not Sooner — Why Different Kind of Regeneration During the Millennium — How and Why the Church Is Regenerated.

New York City, Nov. 1. — Pastor Russell, at the New York City Temple, took for his subject, "The Regeneration of the Church and of the World." His text was, "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again."— John 3:7.

The speaker demonstrated from Scripture that regeneration, second birth, is absolutely necessary if we would attain everlasting life. Adam's death sentence hindered him from giving his children the perfection of life in which he was created. For six thousand years his posterity have entered the world under a death sentence. The forfeited life cannot be prolonged; the Supreme Judge of the Universe cannot set aside His own decision. But God could provide for the regenerating of Adam and his race. The Divine provision is that our Lord left the Heavenly glory and became a man for the purpose of ransoming all mankind. The record is that Jesus' sacrificed life is sufficient to cancel all Adamic sin. On the basis of that sacrifice, Jesus was raised from the dead a "quickening Spirit," a life-giving Personage, with a glory far higher than that which He formerly had.—Philippians 2:9.

The glorified Jesus is Scripturally styled the Second Adam, the Life-Giver and the Everlasting Father—the Father who gives everlasting life. This Second Adam will give life to the world during the thousand years of His Messianic Reign. The regenerating influences will begin with their awakening from the death sleep. Those awakened will be in the condition of mind in which they fell asleep—very similar to those living at that time. Before any of them can be regenerated, they must be brought to a knowledge of the Truth. The Scriptures assure us that this will be accomplished.—Isaiah 11:9.

The World's Regeneration. The news of God's Love and of the possibilities of return to His favor through Jesus' atoning work being clearly demonstrated to all, each will have opportunity to decide whether or not he desires to return to human perfection and everlasting life. To do so, each must be begotten again by the Life-Giver. Wilful rejectors of the privilege will, we are assured, die the Second Death, while those accepting the Saviour's proposals will come under disciplinary experiences which will gradually lift them up to man's original perfection.

"Cells" and "Sells"

Consider these facts before you decide on your war-time advertising policy : When a firm advertises a brand of merchandise it thereby pre-empt certain brain cells in the minds of a certain number of people.

Those cells, in each brain, store away the arguments in favor of that brand ; and become factors in inducing their owner to purchase the advertised, branded merchandise.

Now, along comes War, with all its unsettling of business, all its disturbance of trade ; and the manufacturer faced with the apparent advisability of day a lawyer pleading a case made bold to enter a protest. He most solemnly inquired if he could count upon the continuous and undivided attention of even one justice to the thread of his argument. "The personnel of the court has been twice entirely changed since I began," he said plainly.

The court deigned no response, but on the following Monday it was announced from the bench that a recess or luncheon thereafter would be taken every day from 2 to 2:30 o'clock and that the court would sit until 4:30 clock every afternoon. — World's Work.

Birds That Fight Eagles.

In Foulia, one of the Shetland islands, the natives make a business of raising skau gulls in order to rid the lands of eagles that congregate there and commit many depredations. The magnificent red sandstone cliffs that skirt the northwestern coast became favorite haunts of the eagles, and in its inaccessible spot they increased so rapidly that they became a terror to the farmers and fishermen who dwell in this isolated spot. The skau gulls are also strong and fierce and the inveterate foes of the eagle. In battle the gulls are nearly always victorious, and so the inhabitants of Foulia hit upon the novel plan of feeding and tending for the skau gulls, which, though formidable to their feathered enemies, are very peaceful and docile when brought in contact with man. — Dallas News.

Making a Beach.

Weymouth owes the beginning of its popularity as a health and pleasure resort to an accident. In 1763 a west England doctor whose name is now forgotten advised one of his patients—Alph Allen, a prominent philanthropist of Bath—to "bathe his body in the open sea." By mere chance Allen lectured Weymouth, and the first wooden bathing machine was built. Then crowds gathered to watch the "madman" enter the water. But the patient got better, told the Duke of Gloucester all about it, and—Weymouth as made.—London Tatler.

His Alibi.

"If you are innocent," said a lawyer to his client, an old darky, who was charged with stealing a ham, "we ought to be able to prove an alibi." "I don't specs we kin," the darky replied doubtfully.

"At what time was the ham stolen?"

"'Bout lebben erlock, day say."

"Well, where were you between 11 o'clock and midnight—in bed?"

"No, sah. I was hidin' de ham."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Eagerly Communicative.

"A man ought not to have any secrets from his wife."

"Secrets?" exclaimed Mr. Meekton. "I spend hours trying to make an impression on Scarlett by thinking up something to tell her that she doesn't know."—Washington Star.

perfection and everlasting life. To do so, each must be begotten again by the Life-Giver. Wilful rejectors of the privilege will, we are assured, die the Second Death, while those accepting the Saviour's proposals will come under disciplinary experiences which will gradually lift them up to man's original perfection.

The words beget, born, regenerated, suggest our natural birth; but we are not to expect, as Nicodemus queried, to be born again as an infant. The begetting to a new birth will be in the mind—covenant relationship with the Life-Giver.

Nevertheless, it was pointed out, there is a beautiful analogy. While Adam was designed to be the life-giver, father, of humanity, Eve was to be its nourisher, care-taker, to bring the race to complete development. So while our Lord is the Life-Giver in the sense that He gave His life as Adam's Ransom-price, the Church, especially called and qualified during this Gospel Age, will be the antitypical Eve—the Mother of the world.

The Pastor then carefully explained how our Lord's resurrection was His second birth. The Logos exchanged His spirit nature for the human, but He could not exchange the human nature again for the spiritual; else there would have been no object served in His humiliation.

After His resurrection, our Lord illustrated the lesson given to Nicodemus. He came and went like the wind. During those forty days He appeared several times for the instruction of His disciples, just as angels have done. Later He ascended on High.

It then was shown that the Church will have a similar change of nature; and that, as with our Lord, this begetting to a new nature begins at consecration and culminates in the resurrection change—the birth to the new nature. Many Scriptures were used in demonstrating this truth. It was also pointed out that this begetting and birth is manifestly different from that provided for the world, which is a regeneration to the human nature which Adam lost, but which Christ redeemed for mankind.

It was also noted that the Church has a different Father. Jesus is not the Life-Giver of this Divine life, which the Church is promised. (2 Peter 1:4.) He did not redeem it or secure it for anybody. He redeemed human nature and secured the right to regenerate the world to human nature. The Church's begetting or regeneration is by the Heavenly Father Himself, as the Scriptures distinctly say. (1 Peter 1:3.) He alone can give the Divine nature.

This does not signify that the Church is not indebted to her Redeemer; for the Scriptures distinctly state that without Him we could do nothing; that "by His stripes we are healed"; and that before the Heavenly Father would deal with us at all—before He would accept our consecration or sacrifice—it was necessary that Jesus should appear on our behalf as our Advocate and Surety, and thus open up to us a new way to life.

A Floral Chameleon.

A marvelous flower has been discovered in the isthmus of Tehuantepec. Its chief peculiarity is the habit of changing its color during the day. In the morning it is white; when the sun is at its zenith it is red, and at night it is blue. The red, white and blue flower grows on a tree about the size of a guava tree, and only at noon does it give out any perfume.

Those cells, in each brain, store away the arguments in favor of that brand; and become factors in inducing their owner to purchase the advertised, branded merchandise.

Now, along comes War, with all its unsettling of business, all its disturbance of trade; and the manufacturer, faced with the apparent advisability of saving money, begins to consider whether advertising is one of the features on which he can retrench.

But let him cease advertising—and soon, very soon, the public will begin to waver and drift away to other brands. Stop the appeal to those brain cells and soon, very soon, the cells will forswear their allegiance and become acquired by other manufacturers who make a fresh appeal to them.

The brain of every human being is in constant process of change. The cells are shifting, shifting all the time. Ordinarily, by steady persistent advertising, the manufacturer of a sound article is not only holding the brain cells his goods have won, but is surely, steadily adding to the number of his acquired cells—surely, steadily increasing his hold on the public mind.

Let him stop the advertising and the process of cell capture not only closes, but the cells he has been at such pains to win over, will become lost to him—perhaps forever.

Even a War scarcely excuses the unsound business policy which permits such a catastrophe. Even in war-time, it behooves every manufacturer to keep his advertising at full pressure.

JOHN STOWE'S REWARD.

The Beggar Historian Got Royal Permission to Solicit Alms.

James I. on March 8, 1803, granted letters patent under the great seal to John Stowe, London's great historian, authorizing him to beg. The letters patent of James I. authorized Stowe to collect the voluntary contributions of the people. The letter recites that:

"Whereas, Our loving subject, John Stowe, a very aged and worthy member of our city of London, this five and forty years hath to his great charge and with neglect of his ordinary means of maintenance, for the general good as well of posterity as of the present age, compiled and published diverse necessary books and chronicles, and therefore we, in recompense of his labors and for the encouragement to the like, have in our royal inclination been pleased to grant letters patent under our great seal of England, dated March 8, 1803, thereby authorizing him to collect among our loving subjects their voluntary contributions and kind gratuities."

John Stowe died on April 5, 1805, and was buried in the parish Church of St. Andrew Undershaft, where his monument, erected by his widow, is still to be seen.—London Stray Stories.

A Journalist Bought Suez.

The journalist is often the man behind the statesman, but he seldom gets the credit. Who was it that induced Mr. Disraeli to buy the Suez canal shares which have proved so abundantly good an investment, with dividends that are represented not only by money, though even from that point of view it is the best investment that a state has ever made? Fleet street knows and honors the name of Mr. Frederick Greenwood both for that reason and for many another. But how many outside the world of journalism realize that but for Mr. Greenwood the Suez canal shares would probably have been purchased by a rival continental power? The question was one among those put in a "general intelligence" examination paper a little time back at a certain school. Only one boy was able to answer it correctly, and he was the son of the prime minister.—London Chronicle.

Discordant Thoughts.

In wandering through your mental pleasure grounds, whenever you come upon an ugly intruder of a thought which might bloom into some poisonous emotion, such as fear, envy, hate, worry, remorse, anger and the like, there is only one right way to treat it, writes Robert H. Schaffner in the Atlantic. Pull it up like a weed, drop it upon the rubbish heap as promptly as if it were a stinging nettle and let some harmonious thought grow in its place. There is no more reckless consumer of all kinds of exuberance than the discordant thought, and weeding it out saves such an astonishing amount of eau de vie wherewith to water the garden of joy that with it in hand every man may be his own Burbank.

MEXICO'S ROYAL GHOST.

Legend of the Rumbling Cave of Las Siervas Hot Springs.

The hot springs of Las Siervas, near Valle de Canizos, in a remote part of the state of Guerrero, Mexico, have been visited by few people from the outside world, but they are famous in the legends and history of the Indian tribes of that part of the republic.

According to the natives, the waters of the springs possess great medicinal properties. In ancient times the springs were the favorite bathing resort of the noble families of the Tepaneca, Alcolhua and other tribes that lived in that region.

On both sides of the chief spring there are huge rocks with hieroglyphics and the figures of women beautifully carved. Judging from the robes worn by the women, their stately appearance and the jewels around their necks, the figures must represent princesses or ladies of very high rank.

The spring is at the entrance to a grotto that has never been explored. From the grotto a rumbling sound resembling distant thunder is to be heard all the time. According to natives, the rumble is caused by the ghost of King Excamina, who ruled over that part of the country three or four centuries before the Spaniards discovered America.

King Excamina, the tradition says, was as bad as man could be. He murdered people merely for the pleasure of seeing them die and committed every crime. He had his palace constructed in another cave, which communicated with that of the spring by a tunnel. There Excamina, in company with some of his favorites, had orgies that lasted weeks and months.

When he died an earthquake destroyed his palace. Since that day his ghost has been haunting the cave near the spring, and none of the natives has ever dared go into the cave.—New York Sun.

OMENS IN BASEBALL.

A Manager's Method of Turning a Superstition to Account.

Writing on baseball matters in the New York Tribune, John J. McGraw has this to say about the superstitions of the players:

"I recognize the superstitions of ball players. For example, back in 1904, when Bowerman was with the team, he came to me one day and said:

"As I came in today I saw a team of white horses driving past the Polo grounds. That's a good sign. Watch me kill the ball this afternoon."

"He did. The belief in his superstition had given him confidence. Bowerman spread the tidings of the white horses around the clubhouse. The next day somebody else saw the white horses, so the day after. By the end of the week the entire team was hitting like a house on fire. They all believed in the superstition, and it gave them confidence. One day my short-stop, Dahlen, remarked:

"Funny those white horses always happen to drive past the ball park just when we are coming into the clubhouse. It's certainly lucky."

"I heard him and couldn't keep back a smile. On the day Bowerman told me he had seen the horses I made up my mind that everybody else would see them as long as it helped their batting. So I engaged a man to drive past the Polo grounds every day. That is a fact, and it shows the lengths to which a manager will go to cater to ball players' superstitions."

PEPPERY COMPOSERS.

Masters of Music Who Had Nice Temper of Their Own.

Even in the presence of his royal pupils Handel would sometimes fly into most violent passions.

"You forget yourself, Mr. Handel," a court attendant said reprovingly on one such occasion. "You should show more respect to her royal highness!"

"Royal highness!" snorted the musician contemptuously. "Bah! De respect is due to me! There are many brincesses, but only one Handel!"

On another occasion, when George I. sent a message summoning him to an interview, he returned this answer:

"Dell his bajesty he bust wald. By tibe is bore imbordant dan his!"

Viotti, the famous French musician of the eighteenth century, had an equal contempt for royalty and an exaggerated opinion of himself, as the following story shows: One day he was summoned to Versailles to play before Marie Antoinette and the court. The performance had begun; the opening bars of his favorite solo commanded breathless attention, when a cry was heard:

"Place for Mgr. the Comte d'Artois!"

At the sound Viotti immediately ceased playing, cast an indignant glance at his audience, placed his violin under his arm and walked out of the place.

When Marie Antoinette once inquired of Gluck how his new opera was progressing he answered, "Madame, it is nearly finished, and I assure you it will be superb," a conceit which was rivaled by that of Meyerbeer, who, when a friend declared that if anything better could be composed than one of his rival operas he would dance on his head, answered, "If that is so I should advise you to start practicing at once, for I have just commenced

AN UNSAFE JOB.

To Be a King In Southeastern Europe Is Hazardous.

A king or an heir to a throne in the Balkan states holds the most hazardous position among royalties. The murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg added two more names to the list of royal murders.

Compared with other sections of the world, the 200,000 square miles of Balkan territory present the climax of murder and political intrigue, and the rulers therefore are forced to live in utter loneliness and seclusion.

In the few months that have elapsed since his accession to the throne of Albania Prince William has been in constant terror of his life. Austrian and Italian warships linger within range of his castle at Durazzo, while 500 of their sailors are in constant attendance on the prince.

Twice he has been forced to take refuge on men-of-war while Mussulman insurgents stormed the Albanian capital. Every possible precaution has been taken to guard him, but his life is constantly in danger.

The assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia at Belgrade in June, 1903, was one of the most tragic in history. With them were slain two of the ministry, the queen's two brothers and two members of the royal guard, who attempted to protect them.

There had been no previous hint of a plot or uprising. The city of Belgrade had been draped with flags in commemoration of the anniversary of the assassination of Prince Michael, who was slain June 11, 1868, in the park at Topschider, and a requiem mass was being said in his honor.

March 18, 1913, King George I. of Greece was assassinated while walking on the streets of Saloniki. A previous attempt on his life had been unsuccessful.

Other regicides and political murders in this little territory include the following:

July 25, 1895—Stanislaus Stambouloff, ex-Premier of Bulgaria, killed by four persons armed with knives and revolvers.

Sept. 7, 1878—Pasha Mehemet Ali, murdered by Albanians.

June 4, 1876—Hussem Avni and other Turkish ministers killed by Hassam, a Circassian officer.

June 4, 1876—Abdul Aziz, Sultan of Turkey, assassinated.

June 10, 1878—Prince Michael of Serbia, killed.

Aug. 13, 1860—Daniel, Prince of Serbia, slain.

Oct. 9, 1831—Cato D'Istria, Greek count and statesman, tortured and killed.

The people of the various kingdoms are exceedingly patriotic, but when this passion turns against a king or official an assassination follows.

The Ancient Stoue Slingers.

It has been said that Asiatic nations excelled others in the use of the sling, and the slingers of an ancient army used their little weapons with terrible effect. "These natives have such skill," says one old historian, "that it very rarely happens that they miss their aim. What makes them so great in the use of the sling is the training given them from their earliest years by their mothers, who set up a piece of bread hung at the end of a rod for a target and let their children remain without food until they have hit it, when the child who is the victor receives the bread as the reward of his skill and patience."

the place.

When Marie Antoinette once inquired of Gluck how his new opera was progressing he answered, "Madame, it is nearly finished, and I assure you it will be superb," a conceit which was rivalled by that of Meyerbeer, who, when a friend declared that if anything better could be composed than one of his rival operas he would dance on his head, answered, "If that is so I should advise you to start practicing at once, for I have just commenced the fourth act of 'The Huguenots'."

Even Haydn, usually the most modest of men, showed at times that he had as good an opinion of his own merits as any of his admirers. On one occasion, when a friend said to him of his "Salomon" symphonies, "Sir, I am strongly of opinion that you will never surpass these wonderful symphonies," he answered placidly, "No; I never mean to attempt the impossible!"

CURIOUS CARD TRICK.

It Deals With Odd Numbers, and the Explanation Is a Mystery.

There is a puzzle which may be performed with any odd number of objects, playing cards being usually employed, and which any one can do, but no one seems able to explain the reason for it. Let us suppose the number selected to be twenty-seven cards, although fifteen or twenty-one would do just as well.

After having them shuffled hold them in the left hand face upward and then deal them face upward one at a time in three piles so that the fourth card comes on the first and the fifth on the top of the second and so on until you have three piles of nine cards each.

Request any person who is watching you to make a silent note of any card he pleases, and when you have finished dealing to tell you in which pile the card lies. By picking up the three piles again one at a time as before, the noted card will reappear. Ask in which pile it came that time and place that pile in the middle as before.

Upon dealing the cards into three piles for the third time note carefully the card that comes in the middle of each pile. With twenty-seven there will be nine in each pile and the fifth will be the middle card. Now, when the person who selected the card names the pile in which his card comes you will know it was the middle card of that pile. With this knowledge in your possession you can finish the trick in any manner you please.

This is only a statement of results, but what is the explanation or reason for it? What is the rule that makes it always come out right, regardless of the number of objects used, so that it is odd?—New York Sun.

Where the Fault Lay.

A newspaper man tells of a friend who edited, with more or less success, a paper in a small town. That he was somewhat discouraged by the lack of interest shown in his journal was evidenced by this notice which one afternoon appeared on the editorial page:

"Burglars entered our house last night. To the everlasting shame of the community for whose welfare we have labored, be it said, they got nothing."—Harper's Magazine.

SEEKING FOR A PLAN TO PUNISH CANADA

Before the war is over Germany is reasonably certain to try to punish Canada for sending troops to oppose her armies in Europe. In Egypt, in India, and in South Africa, Germany has done her best to make trouble for Britain, and it is not too much to expect that the Dominion that is adding most to the strength of the British forces will receive a share of attention. An invasion from across the Atlantic is out of the question. A naval raid on our Pacific coast might cause some damage, while an attack at various points along the United States by German sympathizers in the Republic might be expected by Germany to offer prospect of punishment for Canada, as well as to keep Canadians so uneasy as to deter the sending of more contingents to the European arena. Raids into Canada would also offer a chance of embroiling Britain and the United States, as the Fenian raids threatened to do fifty years ago. Germany would dearly love to embitter the relations between Washington and London.

There is absolutely no occasion for alarm over the prospect of a filibustering attack on Canadian territory. The United States will do her best to head off all raids, and our people are well able to deal with any stray parties that manage to get across the border line. But unpreparedness invites attack. Pro-Germans in the United States should not be under the misapprehension that our border towns and cities are in a state of helplessness. The number of homeguards should be multiplied, some of the militia should be kept constantly under arms at important points, and the general truth that Canada is prepared for all emergencies in spite of the fact that she has sent out of the country thirty thousand armed men should be made known to the world. In United States, there are about thirteen hundred thousand males of 21 years and over who were born in Germany, which is more than those from the British Isles, but only a small proportion of them are rabid partisans, so far as this war is concerned.

GUARDS ON BRIDGES AND ONTARIO CANNLS

The C.P.R. puts no credence whatever in the alleged plot to blow up the Welland Canal and the Hamilton Tunnel. The local office to-day received a telegram from Inspector Catlow of the department of investigation in Hamilton, which read: "Have investigated report. Nothing in it." Over the telephone Inspector Catlow stated that he had no idea how the rumor could have originated.

That within the next 24 hours the police will have under arrest the head of a German organization, formed to further German interests in Canada, was the information received. The man suspected of being actively engaged in the preparation of a plot to blow up the Welland Canal and the bridges near Hamilton is said to be living in the beach district and while the Detective Department absolutely refused to discuss the case, it is understood that the Provincial Police have been gathering evidence against the suspect for the past five weeks.

Copeland's Cure For Consumption
WINS CONFIDENCE BY ITS WONDERFUL CURATIVE POWERS.

MR. W. R. COPELAND.
Dear Sir—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive today witnesses to the merit of your medicine. My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend or mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I wish everyone could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others.

I remain, Gratefully yours,
DAVID WARNOCK,
Street Car Conductor,
201 Withrow Ave., Toronto.

The remarkable power of this medicine marks it as one of the greatest discoveries of this century. Its work is only just started, but it is safe to say that its reputation will grow world-wide.

It is a blessing, as all who have used it testify. To the real "down-and-out" consumptive, the chronic sufferers from bronchial and lung troubles—it is something more than a blessing. To them it means the difference between happiness and misery, and sometimes life instead of a grave.

It is a medicine that is honest. No false claims are made for it. It is good, most beneficently good for the ailments specified above. These, even consumption, it will tackle, fight and OVERCOME. If you have a bad cough or cold—take this medicine. If you are a consumptive—take this medicine, for a greater medicine for consumption has NEVER BEEN KNOWN. If you are troubled with bronchitis and can't sleep at night for coughing—take this medicine. Your trouble will become a memory. If your throat or lungs are in any way weak or sensitive—take this medicine—and they will become strong and normal.

Cavities heal under its benign influence. Congestion is freed by its action to remove phlegm until the lungs are clear and work naturally without pain or distress. Emaciation, night sweats, poor appetite, inability to retain food in the stomach—all these effects of disease are mastered and the system built up under its curative and nourishing powers. Ask your druggist, or send direct to us. Price, $1.00 per bottle. Testimonials of many others can be had on request.

THE DUKE STEPPED IN,
PREVENTED ELECTION

Plan of Hon. Robt Rogers To Snap Five Years More of Power Halted.

ALL WAS IN READINESS

The Hon. C. J. Doherty Managed the Changes in the Dominion Cabinet.

Canada is not going to go through the throes of a general election this fall. That much has been decided. The day for gathering the harvest has been postponed, and hereby hangs a tale that is being told with considerable relish here—a tale that is fast spreading across Canada.

No official denial has been or will be made, and the story is vouched for by one who knows what is transpiring in the inner circles where the political pot is always kept, if not at boiling point, at least ready for an emergency.

The story concerns his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and the Conservative party, more particularly the Hon. Robert Rogers, and deals with how it came to pass that Canada hasn't a general election to help divert its mind from the European catastrophe.

A CAPABLE ELECTIONEER.
Hon. Bob Rogers is the Cabinet Minister whose open statement is that "while I may not know everything in the world, at least I do know how to win elections." He has proved that to be the case. The West will recall the fact if the East has forgotten it.

Under the circumstances it was to be expected that the Hon. Bob would not be the one to overlook the chance of securing a snap verdict from the people of Canada. The Empire was at war. Canada was endeavoring to do her part. Men and money were being sent to England. What more

It was too much to give up.
BEGAN TO PREPARE.

And so orders were sent out to prepare the lists. Galleys of names covered with dust were unearthed in the job office of a printing plant whose boast it is that it has secured more Government business since its Ottawa representative became the personal aide-de-camp—press agent, if you will—of Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes than it did in any quarter of a century in its long existence as one of the chief Conservative organs. An extra staff was put at work.

Then trouble began. It came to the ears of those so busy that it mightn't be possible to put it through Premier Sir (Robert Borden) was known to be, if not actually opposed, at least not altogether too pleased. Still the Hon. Bob insisted.

Before an election can be held, however, it is necessary to secure the consent of the Governor-General. He has to sign the warrant. Emissaries were sent to Rideau Hall.

And then the bubble burst!

There is no authentic record of what his Royal Highness said, but it did the trick. With the future of the Empire in such dire peril, was it to be expected that the uncle of the King would allow such an obvious piece of political trickery to be played in the Dominion in which he exercised the royal prepotogatives.

CABINET CHANGES.

It was all over. The printing of the lists was stopped, word was sent out that never, no never, was there the slightest intention of doing any such thing. And the conservative papers from coast to coast duly published long interviews to that end.

Immediately after there was talk of cabinet changes. With a general election in the offing the disappointed section would be made wait. Now, however, they had their say.

And so, the Hon. L. P. Pelletier gave way to T. Chase Casgrain, and Bruno Nantel to Nationalist Blondin, who so strenuously opposed Sir Wilfrid Laurier's plan to have Canada contribute her share to the defence of the Empire.

Things have quieted down now, but some day someone may tell the story

U.S. GIVES WARNING.

The information which led to the guards being doubled on the canal and the placing of railroad constables in the vicinity of the tunnel came, it is declared, from a Washington agent of the United States Government. This man, who was formerly an employee of the Provincial Police, has been in Toronto since the last week in September. The United States agent learned of the activities of a Toronto German while in Washington.

The United States Department, it is claimed, communicated with the department at Ottawa with the result that the Dominion police were assigned to the case, the American agent being sent here to render any assistance possible. For some time he has been stationed at Welland, Buffalo, and in the Niagara district, going to Toronto on Saturday to report. It is claimed that he furnished sufficient information to the Dominion police to warrant a thorough investigation of the character of an east end resident, now under surveillance.

PLENTY OF DETECTIVES.

Chief of the C.P.R. detectives for Ontario, H. Catlow, left with five of his men for Hamilton to investigate the Hamilton end of the case.

The military authorities gave the assurance that "the necessary precautions had been taken" in regard to the canal. There have been countless rumors received of activities of Germans, and for some reason Saturdays seem to be the favorite days for these reports. A policy of heeding even rumors, and thus working on the safe side, has been followed, and when a report in regard to the Welland Canal was received the guard was increased three days ago.

THE BRIDGE GUARDED.

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 2.—Through-out the night railway detectives and local police stood guard over the railway bridges crossing the Desjardins Canal, following the tip furnished the local authorities by the Dominion police of a German plot to wreck these structures and the Welland Canal. The railways have been under guard since the war broke out. While Superintendent Gordon, of the Grand Trunk, and other railway officials here were inclined to place little credence in the rumored plot, it was evident from the precautions taken in sending a squad of armed men out to the canal, that the authorities were taking no chances.

Canada was endeavoring to do her part. Men and money were being sent to England. What more natural then than to feel reasonably sure that the people of Canada would feel in duty bound to allow the Government in power to remain, to carry out the work it had begun? The Liberal party had declared a truce. Issues of such supreme moment to the Empire could not be discussed at such a time. It was betting on a sure thing. How foolish it would be to overlook the opportunity.

This was the plan, and feelers were sent out. The first one appeared in a New York paper and was duly wired back to Canada—as it was intended it should. Liberal papers could hardly believe any such a scheme was afoot, and even a few Conservative ones, notably the Montreal Star, stood aghast at the effrontery of the thing.

However, Mr. Rogers, who "knows how to win elections," wasn't going to give in so soon. Four more years in power without having to struggle?

And yet he wondered, poor fool, how other young men who had started far in the rear were able to pass him in race of life.

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1913, by Kate Douglas Wiggin

Ivory read the correspondence with a heavy heart, inasmuch as it corroborated all his worst fears. He had sometimes secretly hoped that his father might return and explain the reason of his silence or in lieu of that that there might come to light the story of a pilgrimage, fanatical perhaps, but innocent of evil intention, one that could be related to his wife and his former friends and then buried forever with the death that had ended it.

Neither of these hopes could now ever be realized nor his father's memory made other than a cause for endless regret, sorrow and shame. His father, who had begun life so handsomely, with rare gifts of mind and personality, a wife of unusual beauty and intelligence and, while still young in years, a considerable success in his chosen profession. His poor father! What could have been the reasons for so complete a downfall?

Ivory asked Dr. Perry's advice about showing one or two of the briefer letters and the lock to his mother. After her fainting fit and the exhaustion that followed it, Ivory begged her to see the old doctor, but without avail. Finally, after days of pleading, he took her hands in his and said: "I do everything a mortal man can do to be a good son to you, mother. Won't you do this to please me and trust that I know what is best?" Whereupon she gave a trembling assent, as if she were agreeing to something indescribably painful, and, indeed, this sight of a former friend seemed to frighten her strangely.

After Dr. Perry had talked with her for a half hour and examined her sufficiently to make at least a reasonable guess as to her mental and physical condition, he advised Ivory to break the news of her husband's death to her.

"If you can get her to comprehend it," he said, "it is bound to be a relief from this terrible suspense."

"Will there be any danger of making her worse? Mightn't the shock cause too violent emotion?" asked Ivory anxiously.

"I don't think she is any longer capable of violent emotion," the doctor answered. "Her mind is certainly clearer than it was three years ago, but her body is nearly burned away by the mental conflict. There is scarcely any part of her but is weary—worn out to death, poor soul! One cannot look at her patient, lovely face without longing to lift some part of her burden. Make a trial, Ivory. It's a justifiable experiment, and I think it will succeed. I must not come any oftener myself than is absolutely necessary. She seemed afraid of me."

ed, but still kept up her murmuring faintly and feebly between long intervals of silence.

"Do you think Waitstill could come tomorrow?" she asked. "I am so much braver when she is here with me. After supper I will put away your father's cup and plate once and for all, Ivory, and your eyes need never fill with tears again as they have sometimes when you have seen me watching. You needn't worry about me; I am remembering better these days, and the bells that ring in my ears are not so loud. If only the pain in my side were less and I were not so pressed for breath, I should be quite strong and could see everything clearly at last. There is something else that remains to be remembered. I have almost caught it once and it must come to me again before long. Put the lock to under my pillow, Ivory; close the door, please, and leave me to myself. I can't make it quite clear, my feeling about it, but it seems just as if I were going to bury your father, and I want to be alone."

New England's annual pageant of autumn was being unfolded day by day in all its accustomed splendor, and the feast and riot of color, the almost unimaginable glory, was the common property of the whole countryside, rich and poor, to be shared alike if perchance all eyes were equally alive to the wonder and the beauty.

Waitstill Baxter went as often as she could to the Boynton farm, though never when Ivory was at home, and the affection between the younger and the older woman grew closer and closer, so that it almost broke Waitstill's heart to leave the fragile creature when her presence seemed to bring such complete peace and joy.

"No one ever clung to me so before," she often thought as she was hurrying across the fields after one of her half hour visits. "But the end must come before long. Ivory does not realize it yet, nor Rodman, but it seems as if she could never survive the long winter."

Thanksgiving day is drawing nearer and nearer, and how little I am able to do for a single creature to prove to God that I am grateful for my existence! I could, if only I were free, make such a merry day for Patty and Mark and their young friends. Oh, what joy if father were a man who would let me set a bountiful table in our great kitchen; would sit at the head and say grace and we could bow our heads over the cloth, a united family, or if I had done my duty in my home and could go to that other, where I am so needed—go with my father's blessing! All the woman in me is wasting, wasting. Oh, my dear, dear man, how I long for him! Oh, my own dear man, my helpmate, shall I ever live by his side? I love him, I want him, I need him! And my dear little unmothered, unfathered boy, how happy I could make him! How I should love to cook and sew for them all and wrap them in comfort! How I should love to smooth my dear mother's last days, for she is my mother in spirit, in affection, in desire and in being Ivory's!"

Waitstill's longing, her discouragement, her helplessness, overcame her wholly, and she flung herself down under a tree in the pasture in a very passion of sobbing, a luxury in which she could seldom afford to indulge herself. The luxury was short lived, for in five minutes she heard Rodman's voice, and heard him running to meet her, and heard him running to meet

her. "We have great fun cooking, too," continued Rod. "When Aunt Boynton was first sick she stayed in bed more, and Ivory and I hadn't got used to things. One morning we bound up each other's burns. Ivory had three fingers and I two done up in buttery rags to take the fire out. Ivory called us 'soldiers dressing their wounds after the battle.' Sausages spatter dreadfully, don't they? And when you turn a pancake it flops on top of the stove. Can you flop one straight, Waity?"

"Yes, I can; straight as a die; that's what girls are made for. Now run along home to your big brother, and do put on some warmer clothes under your coat. The weather's getting colder."

"Aunt Boynton hasn't patched our thick ones yet, but she will soon, and, if she doesn't, Ivory'll take this Saturday evening and do them herself. He said so."

"He shall not!" cried Waitstill passionately. "It is not seemly for Ivory to sew and mend, and I will not allow it. You shall bring me those things that need patching without telling any one, do you hear, and I will meet you on the edge of the pasture Saturday afternoon and give them back to you. You are not to speak of it to any one, you understand, or perhaps I shall pound you to a jelly! You'd make a sweet rose jelly to eat with turkey for Thanksgiving dinner, you dear, comforting little boy!"

Rodman ran toward home, and Waitstill hurried along, scarcely noticing the beauties of the woods and fields and waysides, all glowing masses of goldenrod and purple frost flowers.

Patty was standing under a little rock maple, her brown linsey-woolsey in tone with the landscape and the hood of her brown cape pulled over her bright head. She looked flushed and excited as she ran up to her sister and said: "Waity, darling, you've been crying! Has father been scolding you?"

"No, dear, but my heart is aching today so that I can scarcely bear it. A wave of discouragement came over me as I was walking through the woods, and I gave up to it a bit. I remembered how soon it will be Thanksgiving day, and I'd so like to make it happier for you and a few others that I love."

Patty could have given a shrewd guess as to the chief cause of the heartache, but she forebore to ask any questions. "Cheer up, Waity!" she cried. "You can never tell. We may have a thankful Thanksgiving, after all."

CHAPTER XX.

Phoebe Triumphs.

MRS. ABEL DAY had come to spend the afternoon with Aunt Abby Cole, and they were seated at the two sitting room windows, sweeping the landscape with eagle eyes in the intervals of making patchwork.

"The foliage has been a little mite too rich this season," remarked Aunt Abby. "I believe I'm glad to see it thinning out some, so 't we can have some kind of an idee of what's goin' on in the village."

"There's plenty goin' on," Mrs. Day answered unctuously, "some of it above board an' some underneath it."

"An' that's jest where it's aggravatin' to have the leaves so thick and the trees so high between you and other folks' houses. Trees are good for dier'n he used to be, but you needn't tell me he has any notion of bringin' one o' that Baxter tribe into his family. He's only amusin' himself."

"Patty 'll be Mrs. Wilson or nothin'," was Mrs. Day's response. "Bot o' them girls is silk purses, an' you can't make sows' ears of 'em. W' ain't neither of us hardly fair to Patty, an' I s'pose it's because she didn't set any proper value on Cephas."

"Oh, she's good enough for Mark, guess, though I ain't so sure of his intentions as you be. She's nobody's fool, Patty ain't; I allow that, though she did treat Cephas like the dirt in the road. I'm thankful he's come to his senses an' found out the difference between dross an' gold."

"It's very good of you to put it that way, Abby," Mrs. Day responded gratefully, for it was Phoebe, her own offspring, who was alluded to as the most precious metals. "I suppose we'd better have the publishing notice put up in the frame before Sunday! There'll be a great crowd out that day, and at Thanksgiving service the next Thursday too."

"Cephas says he don't care how soon folks hears the news, now all's settled," said his mother. "I guess he's kind of anxious that the village should know jest how little truth there is in the gossip 'bout him bein' all upse over Patience Baxter. He said the; took consid'able notice of him an' Phoebe settin' together at the harvest festival last evenin'. He thought the Baxter girls would be there for certain, but I s'pose Old Foxy wouldn't let 'em go up to the Mills in the evenin' nor spend a quarter on their tick-ets."

"Mark could have invited Patty an' paid for her ticket, I should think, o' passed her in free, for that matter when the Wilsons got up the enter tainment; but, of course, the deacon never allows his girls to go anywhere with men folks."

"Not in public; so they meet 'em sid o' the river or round the corner o' Bart's shop, or anywhere they can when the deacon's back's turned. I you tied a handkerchief over Waitstill's eyes she could find her way, blindfold to Ivory Boynton's house; but she's good as gold, Waitstill is! She'll stay where her duty calls her every time. If any misfortune or scandal should come near them two girls the deacon will have nobody but him self to thank for it, that's one sur thing!"

"Young folks can't be young but once," sighed Mrs. Day. "How'd you like that Boston singer that the Wilsons brought here, Abby? Wait a minute, is Cephas, or the deacon tendin' store this afternoon?"

"The deacon; Cephas is paintin' up to the Mills."

"Well, Mark Wilson's horse an' buggy is meanderin' slowly down Aunt Betty Jack's hill, an' Mark is studyin' the road as if he was lookin' for a four leaved clover."

"He'll hitch at the tavern, or th Edgewood store, an' wait his chance to get a word with Patience," said Aunt Abby. "He knows when she takes milk to the Morrills, or butte to the parsonage; also when she eat an' drinks an' winks her eye an' ketches her breath an' lifts her foot. Now he's disappeared an' we'll wait. * * * Why, as to that Boston singer, I don't know how high she went, but I guess there wa'n't no higher to go!"

"It made me kind o' nervous," allowed Mrs. Day. "Folks said she sung

"I don't think she is any longer capable of violent emotion," the doctor answered. "Her mind is certainly clearer than it was three years ago, but her body is nearly burned away by the mental conflict. There is scarcely any part of her but is weary—worn unto death, poor soul! One cannot look at her patient, lovely face without longing to lift some part of her burden. Make a trial, Ivory. It's a justifiable experiment, and I think it will succeed. I must not come any oftener myself than is absolutely necessary. She seemed afraid of me."

The experiment did succeed. Lois Boynton listened breathlessly with parted lips and with apparent comprehension to the story Ivory told her. Over and over again he told her genscapely with eagle eyes in the intervals of making patchwork.

"The foliage has been a little mite too rich this season," remarked Aunt Abby. "I b'lieve I'm glad to see it thinnin' out some, so 't we can have some kind of an idee of what's goin' on in the village."

"There's plenty goin' on," Mrs. Day answered unctuously, "some of it above board an' some underneath it."

"An' that's jest where it's aggravatin' to have the leaves so thick and the trees so high between you and other folks' houses. Trees are good for shade, it's true, but there's a limit to all things. There was a time when I could see 'bout everything that went on up to Baxters' and down to Bart's shop and, by goin' up attic, consid'able many things that happened on the bridge. Bart vows he never planted that plum tree at the back door of his shop—says the children must have hove out plum stones when they was settin' on the steps and the tree come up of its own accord."

"Men are an awful trial," admitted Mrs. Day. "Abel never sympathizes with my headaches. I told him a Sunday I didn't believe he'd mind if I died the next day, an' all he said was, 'Why don't you try it an' see, Lyddy? He thinks that's humorous."

"Oh, I cannot bear to have you and Ivory cooking for yourselves!" exclaimed Waitstill, the tears starting again from her eyes. "I must come over the next time when you are at home, Rod, and I can help you make something nice for supper."

"We get along pretty well," said Rodman contentedly. "I love book learning like Ivory, and I'm going to be a schoolmaster or a preacher when Ivory's a lawyer. Do you think Patty'd like a schoolmaster or a preacher best, and do you think I'd be too young to marry her by and by, if she would wait for me?"

"I didn't think you had any idea of marrying Patty," laughed Waitstill through her tears. "Is this something new?"

"It's not exactly new," said Rod, jumping along like a squirrel in the path. "Nobody could look at Patty and not think about marrying her. I'd love to marry you, too, but you're too big and grand for a boy. Of course I'm not going to ask Patty yet. Ivory said once you should never ask a girl until you can keep her like a queen. Then after a minute he said: 'Well, maybe not quite like a queen. Rod, for that would mean longer than a man could wait. Shall we say until he could keep her like the dearest lady in the land?' That's the way he said it. You do cry dreadfully easy today, Waity. I'm sure you barked your leg or skinned your knee when you fell down. Don't you think the 'dearest lady in the land' is a nice sounding sentence?"

"I do, indeed!" cried Waitstill to herself as she turned the words over and over trying to feed her hungry heart with them.

"I love to hear Ivory talk. It's like the stories in the books. We have our best times in the barn, for I'm helping with the milking now. Our yellow cow's name is Molly and the red cow used to be Dolly, but we changed her to Golly 'cause she's so troublesome."

"We had a cross old cow like that once," said Waitstill absently, loving to hear the boy's chatter and the eter-scape with eagle eyes in the intervals of making patchwork.

"The foliage has been a little mite too rich this season," remarked Aunt Abby. "I b'lieve I'm glad to see it thinnin' out some, so 't we can have some kind of an idee of what's goin' on in the village."

"There's plenty goin' on," Mrs. Day answered unctuously, "some of it above board an' some underneath it."

tly the story of her husband's death, trying to make it sink into her mind clearly, so that there should be no consequent bewilderment. She was calm and silent, though her face showed that she was deeply moved. She broke down only when Ivory showed her the locket.

"I gave it to my husband when you were born, my son!" she sobbed. "After all, it seems no surprise to me that your father is dead. He said he would come back when the mayflowers bloomed, and when I saw the autumn leaves I knew that six months must have gone and he would never stay away from us for six months without writing. That is the reason I have seldom watched for him these last weeks. I must have known that it was no use."

She rose from her rocking chair and moved feebly toward her bedroom. "Can you spare me the rest of the day, Ivory?" she faltered as she leaned on her son and made her slow progress from the kitchen. "I must bury the body of my grief and I want to be alone at first. If only I could see Waitstill! We have both thought this was coming; she has a woman's instinct; she is younger and stronger than I am and she said it was braver not to watch and pine and fret as I have done, but to have faith in God that he would send me a sign when he was ready. She said if I could manage to be braver you would be happier too." Here she sank on to her bed exhaust-ler'n he used to be, but you needn't all me he has any notion of bringin' ne o' that Baxter tribe into his fam'ly. He's only amusin' himself."

"Patty 'll be Mrs. Wilson or noth'ing," was Mrs. Day's response. "Both 'em girls is silk purses, an' you an't make sows' ears of 'em. We in't neither of us hardly fair to Pat, an' I s'pose it's because she didn't at any proper value on Cephas."

"Oh, she's good enough for Mark, I guess, though I ain't so sure of his intentions as you be. She's nobody's fool, Patty ain't; I allow that, though he did treat Phebe like the dirt in the road. I'm thankful he's come to his senses an' found out the difference between dross an' gold."

"It's very good of you to put it that way, Abby," Mrs. Day responded gratefully, for it was Phebe, her own spring, who was alluded to as the most precious metals. "I suppose we'd better have the publishing notice put up in the frame before Sunday; here'll be a great crowd out that day, and at Thanksgiving service the next Thursday too."

"Cephas says he don't care how soon folks hears the news, now all's set," said his mother. "I guess he's ind of anxious that the village should now jest how little truth there is in the gossip 'bout him bein' all upset over Patience Baxter. He said they took considerable notice of him an' Phebe settin' together at the harvest festival last evenin'. He thought the Baxter girls would be there for certain, but I s'pose Old Foxy wouldn't let 'em go up to the Mills in the evenin' nor spend a quarter on their tickets."

"Mark could have invited Patty an' paid for her ticket, I should think, or passed her in free, for that matter, when the Wilsons got up the entertainment; but, of course, the deacon ever allows his girls to go anywhere with men folks."

"Not in public; so they meet 'em side the river or round the corner of Bart's shop, or anywhere they can, when the deacon's back's turned. If you tied a handkerchief over Waitstill's eyes she could find her way blindfold to Ivory Boynton's house, but she's good as gold, Waitstill is, he'll stay where her duty calls her very time. If any misfortune or scandal should come near them two girls the deacon will have nobody but himself to thank for it, that's one sure thing."

"Young folks can't be young but nice," sighed Mrs. Day. "How'd you ke that Boston singer that the Wilsons brought here, Abby? Wait a minute, is Cephas, or the deacon tendin' here this afternoon?"

"The deacon; Cephas is paintin' up the Mills."

"Well, Mark Wilson's horse an' buggy is meanderin' slowly down Aunt Betty Jack's hill, an' Mark is studyin' the road as if he was lookin' for a new leaved clover."

"He'll hitch at the tavern, or the dgewood store, an' wait his chance to get a word with Patience," said Aunt Abby. "He knows when she takes milk to the Morrills, or butter to the parsonage; also when she eats 'n' drinks an' winks her eye an' ketch-her breath an' lifts her foot. Now she's disappeared an' we'll wait. . . . Why, as to that Boston singer, I don't now how high she went, but I guess here won't no higher to go!"

Cephas, therefore, by the middle of October could be picturesquely and attractively described as being raw from repeated rejections. His bruised heart and his despised self literally cried out for the appreciation so long and blindly withheld. Now all at once Phebe disclosed a second virtue, her first and only one hitherto in the eyes of Cephas having been an ability to get on with his mother a feat in which many had made an effort and few indeed had succeeded. Phebe, it seems, had always secretly admired, respected and loved Cephas Cole. Never since her pale and somewhat glassy blue eye had opened on life had she beheld a being she could so adore if encouraged in the attitude.

The moment this unusual and unexpected politeness was really applied to Cephas' wounds they began to heal. In the course of a month the most ordinary observer could have perceived a physical change in him. He cringed no more, but held his head higher; his back straightened; his voice developed a gruff, assertive note like that of a stern Roman father; he let his mustache grow and sometimes, in his most reckless moments, twiddled the end of it.

And then congratulations began to pour in. Was ever marriage so fortuitous? The Coles' farm joined that of the Days', and the union between the two only children would cement the friendship between the families. The fact that Uncle Bart was a joiner, Cephas a painter and Abel Day a mason and bricklayer made the alliance almost providential in its business opportunities. Phebe's Massachusetts aunt sent a complete outfit of gilt edged china, a clock and a mahogany chamber set. Aunt Abby relinquished to the young couple a bedroom and a spare chamber in the "main part," while the Days supplied live geese feathers and table and bed linen with positive prodigality. Aunt Abby trod the air like one inspired.

"If only I could 'a' looked ahead," smiled Uncle Bart quizzically to himself. "I'd 'a' had thirteen sons and daughters an' married off one of 'em every year. That would 'a' made Abby's good temper kind o' permanent."

Cephas was content too. There was a good deal in being settled and having "the whole doggoned business" off your hands. Phebe looked a very different creature to him in these latter days. Her eyes were just as pale, of course, but they were brighter, and they radiated love for him, an expression in the female eye that he had thus far been singularly unfortunate in securing. She still held her mouth slightly open, but Cephas thought that it might be permissible, perhaps after three months of wedded bliss, to request her to be more careful in closing it.

Cephas did not think of Patty any longer with bitterness in these days, being of the opinion that she was punished enough in observing his own growing popularity and prosperity.

"If she should see that mahogany chamber set going into the ell I guess she'd be glad enough to change her tune," thought Cephas exultingly, and then there suddenly shot through his mind the passing fancy, "I wonder if she would?" He promptly banished the infamous suggestion, however, reinforcing his virtue with the reflection that the chamber set was Phebe's anyway, and the marriage day appointed and the invitations given out and the wedding cake being baked, a brief at a time, by his mother and Mrs.

too, by the ardent affection of a very ordinary young man, who had no great gift save that of loving Patty greatly. The love had served its purpose in another way, too, for under its influence Mark's own manhood had broadened and deepened. He longed to bind Patty to him for good and all, to capture the bright bird whose fluttering wings and burnished plumage so captured his senses and stirred his heart, but his longings had changed with the quality of his love, and he glowed at the thought of delivering the girl from her dreary surroundings and giving her the tenderness, the ease and comfort, the innocent gaiety, that her nature craved.

"You won't fail me, Patty darling?" he was saying at this moment. "Now that our plans are finally made, with never a weak point anywhere as far as I can see, my heart is so set upon carrying them out that every hour of waiting seems an age!"

"No, I won't fail, Mark; but I never know the day that father will go to town until the night before. I can always hear him making his preparations in the barn and the shed, and ordering Waitstill here and there. He is as excited as if he was going to Boston instead of Milltown."

"The night before will do. I will watch the house every evening till you bang a white signal from your window."

"It won't be white," said Patty, who would be mischievous on her deathbed. "My Sunday go-to-meetin' petticoat is too grand, and everything else that we have is yellow."

"I shall see it, whatever color it is, you can be sure of that," said Mark gallantly. "Then it's decided that next morning I'll wait at the tavern from sunrise, and whenever your father and Waitstill have driven up Saco hill I'll come and pick you up, and we'll be off like a streak of lightning across the hills to New Hampshire. come down Guide Board hill that night, Patty, we shall be man and wife; isn't that wonderful?"

"We shall be man and wife in New Hampshire, but not in Maine, you say," Patty reminded him dolefully. "It does seem dreadful that we can't be married in our own state and have to go dangle about with this secret on our minds day and night, but it can't be helped. You'll try not to even think of me as your wife till we go to Portsmouth to live, won't you?"

"You're asking too much when you say I'm not to think of you as my wife, for I shall think of nothing else, but I've given you my solemn promise," said Mark stoutly, "and I'll keep it as sure as I live. We'll be legally married by the laws of New Hampshire, but we won't think of it as a marriage till I tell your father and mine and we drive away once more together. That time it will be in the sight of everybody, with our heads in the air. I've got the little house in Portsmouth all ready, Patty. It's small, but it's in a nice part of the town. Portsmouth is a pretty place, but it'll be a great deal prettier when it has Mrs. Mark Wilson living in it. We can be married over again in Maine afterward if your heart is set upon it. I'm willing to marry you in every state of the Union so far as I am concerned."

"I think you've been so kind and good and thoughtful, Mark, dear," said Patty, more fondly and meltingly than she had ever spoken to him before. "and so clever too. I do respect you for getting that good position in Portsmouth and being able to set up for yourself at your age. I shouldn't wonder a bit if you were a judge some day and then what a proud girl I shall be!"

Patty's praise was bestowed none too frequently, and it sounded very sweet in the young man's ears.

"I do believe I can get on with you to help me, Patty," he said, pressing her arm more closely to his side and looking down ardently into her radiant face. "You're a great deal cleverer than I am, but I'll be a good one for you."

He promptly banished the infamous suggestion, however, re- enforcing his virtue with the reflection that the chamber set was Phoebe's anyway, and the marriage day ap- pointed and the invitations given out and the wedding cake being baked, a loaf at a time, by his mother and Mrs. Day.

As a matter of fact, Patty would have had no eyes for Phoebe's magni- cent mahogany, even had the cart that carried it passed her on the hill where she and Mark Wilson were walking. Her promise to marry him was a few weeks old now, and his arm encircled her slender waist under the brown homespun cape. That in itself was a new sensation and gave her the deli- cious sense of belonging to somebody who valued her highly and assured her of his sentiments clearly and frequent- ly, both by word and deed. Life, dull gray life, was going to change its hue for her presently, and not long after, she hoped, for Waitstill too.

The "publishing" of Cephas and his third choice, their dull walk up the aisle of the meeting house before an admiring throng on the Sunday when Phoebe would "appear bride," all this seemed very tame as compared with the dreams of this ardent and adven- turous pair of lovers who had gone about for days harboring secrets great- er and more daring, they thought, than had ever been breathed before within the hearing of Saco water.

CHAPTER XXII.

Love's Young Dream.

IT was not an afternoon for day dreams, for there was a chill in the air and a gray sky. Only a week before the hills along the river might have been the walls of the New Jerusalem, shining like red gold. Now the glory had departed, and it was a naked world, with empty nests hanging to boughs that not long ago had been green with summer.

Young love thought little of nature's miracles, and hearts that beat high and fast were warm enough to forget the bleak wind and gathering clouds. If there were naked trees were there not full barrels of apples in every cellar? If there was nothing but stubble in the frozen fields, why there was plenty of wheat and corn at the mill all ready for grinding. The cold air made one long for a cheery home and fire- side, the crackle of a hearth log, the bubbling of a steaming kettle, and Patty and Mark clung together as they walked along, making bright images of a life together, sung, warm and happy.

Patty was a capricious creature, but all her changes were sudden and en- dearing ones, captivating those who loved her more than a monotonous and unchanging virtue. Any little shower with Patty always ended with a rain- bow, that made the landscape more enchanting than before. Of late her little coquetties and petulances had disappeared as if by magic. She had been melted somehow from irrespons- ible girlhood into womanhood and that,

"I shall see it, whatever color it is, you can be sure of that!" said Mark gallantly. "Then it's decided that next morning I'll wait at the tavern from sunrise, and whenever your father and Waitstill have driven up Saco hill I'll come and pick you up, and we'll be off like a streak of lightning across the hills to New Hampshire. How lucky that Riverboro is only thirty miles from the state line! It looks like snow, and how I wish it would be something more than a flurry, a regular whizzing, whirling storm that would pack the roads and let us slip over them with our sleigh bells ringing!"

"I should like that, for they would be our only wedding bells. Oh, Mark! What if Waitstill shouldn't go, after all, though I heard father tell her that he needed her to buy things for the store, and that they wouldn't be back till after nightfall. Just to think of being married without Waitstill!"

"You can do without Waitstill on this one occasion, better than you can without me," laughed Mark, pinching Patty's cheek. "I've given the town clerk due notice and I have a friend to meet me at his office. He is going to lend me his horse for the drive home, and we shall change back the next week. That will give us a fresh horse each way and we'll fly like the wind, snow or no snow. When we

And even if we have to begin in a small way my salary will be a certainty, and we'll work up together. I can see you in a yellow satin dress stiff enough to stand alone!"

"It must be white satin, if you please, not yellow! After having used a hundred and ten yards of shop worn yellow calico on myself within two years I never want to wear that color again! If only I could come to you better provided," she sighed, with the suggestion of tears in her voice. "If I'd been a common servant I could have saved something from my wages to be married on. I haven't even got anything to be married in!"

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most depend- able way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

EGGS BY PARCEL POST.

A Method of Packing That Insures Against Breakage.

I have been shipping eggs by parcel post to private customers since last November, says a contributor to the Rural New Yorker, during which time I had one egg broken and which was my own fault. I get my customers by advertising in the Sunday papers. I am now getting 35 cents a dozen net for the eggs I ship, the customer paying the postage and cartons. In other words, I get 41 cents a dozen for eggs shipped, 6 cents of which is for postage. Thirty-five cents a dozen is the lowest price I have reached this summer.

Now for a few pointed thoughts. It is useless, in my opinion, to try to ship eggs by parcel post unless the person making the shippings is particular in small things. There is a way to pack and a time to ship, and unless these precautions are observed failure is sure to follow. I do not know whether all cartons are properly made to carry eggs. The kind I use are of double corrugated paper and the boxes so made that there are two thicknesses of corrugated board on each side of the box. Inside are the usual compartments for each egg, made of the same material.

The secret of success lies in the wrapping of the egg before being placed in the box. My method is to

BEGIN THE FOAL'S TRAINING EARLY

As the young foals come it is wise to handle them every day and get them accustomed to their new surroundings and the people of the farm, writes C.
H. Sapp in the National Stockman.
The young foal is entirely ignorant of the ways of life to which he is destined in the years to come. There will never be a time in his life when it will be easier and more humane to teach him some of the things which he should know than these early weeks of his life.

Early haltering is necessary to the easy and successful training of the future horse. The young foal should

The best mules are produced by mares possessing sufficient draft blood to give them weight and sufficient fine horse blood to give them finish. The colts from pure bred draft mares are apt to be coarse and sluggish. The mules from the pure bred mares of the light horse type sometimes lack scale. The Kentucky farmer is beginning to use 1,200 to 1,400 pound mares in his farm work. He finds that these mares more than pay for their feed do and besides they furnish a good know the object of the halter, should follow the leader at the end of the strap without an unnecessary amount of urging and should stand hitched without pulling fiercely while the dam is led away, by the time it is fifteen days old. This may easily be accomplished by the careful man who will give a little time each day to training.

Do not fail to do this and make the excuse that you do not have the time to fuss with the foal. An hour at this time will accomplish more of value than will ten hours with the unhandled foal six months from now and with only a fraction of the danger to foal or trainer.

THE FLOCK MASTER.

Better for the ewes and better for the lambs to wean on time. It is a short job, but a bad one to delay. After weaning lambs should have fresh grass, grain, salt and plenty of good water.

Leaving a flock in hot summer weather without visiting them at least twice a week to observe whether maggots are not killing some of them is certainly not getting all the profits out of sheep.

Sheep do not drink much water, but what little they drink must be absolutely clean.

Don't expect to make a profit on a flock of sheep unless you give them proper attention.

The ewes and lambs should be kept out of hearing of each other for a time when weaning.

HORSES IN HOT WEATHER.

Rules For Prevention and Cure of Heat Prostration.

Load lightly and drive slowly.

Stop in the shade if possible.

Water as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in moderate quantities will not hurt him. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay.

After work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth and the dock. Wash his feet, but not his legs.

Saturday night give a bran mash,
cold, and add a tablespoonful saltpeper.

Do not use a horse hat unless it is a canopy top hat. The ordinary bell shaped hat does more harm than good.

A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry it is worse than nothing.

If the horse is overcome by heat get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs and give four ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of niter, in a pint of water, or give him a pint of warm coffee. Cool his head at once, using cold water.

If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran and a little water and add a little salt or sugar, or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.

If the horse stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sun stroke
and needs attention at once.

If it is so hot that the horse sweats
in the stable at night, tie him outside.
Unless he cools off during the night he cannot well stand the next day's heat.

wrap each egg in soft tissue paper, cut to a proper size, and then wrap it again in soft brown paper, so as to fill the compartment and not permit it to shake. Care should be taken to have the tissue paper cut so that it can be wrapped loosely around the sides of the eggs, several wraps if possible, and then fold in the paper at the ends. The object sought is to form a soft cushion over the sides of the egg, but be sure that no lumps or knots of paper are formed against the sides of the eggs, which are likely to cause them to break. It is the side of the egg that must be protected rather than the ends. The object of using heavy brown paper is to form additional cushion. The tissue paper is used first for sanitary reasons, preserving the egg and keeping it nice and clean. It is not sufficient to guarantee carrying without breakage. Paper is not all alike in its properties. A harsh brown paper does not make a good cushion for the egg to rest in. Use a soft paper and wrap it loosely, and the egg will withstand the ordinary jarring it receives in transit. The eggs, of course, are placed in the box on ends. Eggs packed in this manner can go anywhere.

I have taken a box of eggs and thrown them across the room to test cut and failed to break any. I tried to pack them wrapped in tissue paper only, but stopped that practice when I found that an egg was broken in the second lot sent out under such methods of packing. I have sent them from Philadelphia to Charlotte, N. C., and to Atlanta, Ga. All of them reached the destination safely. I shipped to my customers during the holiday rush and during the blizzard weather last winter and never lost an egg.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Never be stingy in the use of bedding. It adds comfort to the stock and improves the condition of the land.

Feed the horses which work hard good nourishing food and plenty of it. A half fed horse can't work and thrive. A young horse doing the same work as an old one should have as much feed.

Apples given in small quantities make an excellent feed for colts. There is no better way of getting on good terms with the youngsters than by quartering sweet apples and feeding to them from the hand.

Shredded corn fodder is one of the things that have not been fully appreciated on the farm. It is good for bedding the stock, it is convenient to have in the henhouse as a litter, and it is really worth considerable as a feed.

Farmers will be surprised to find how many boarders they have in the dairy herd if they only test their cows for butter fat. The Ohio station found one herd of twelve cows that had eleven boarders. By boarders are meant cows that do not pay for their keep.

In order to get the most out of oil-mead for hogs it should be mixed with boiling water and allowed to stand a few hours before mixing with the other slop. Some feeders get good results by feeding it dry, but their equipment is different from that of the average pork raiser.

without unnecessary amount of urging and should stand hitched without pulling fiercely while the dam is led away, by the time it is fifteen days old. This may easily be accomplished by the careful man who will give a little time each day to training. Do not fail to do this and make the excuse that you do not have the time to fuss with the foal. An hour at this time will accomplish more of value than will ten hours with the unhandled foal six months from now and with only a fraction of the danger to foal or trainer.

The unhandled foal at weaning age that has made a commendable growth and has a reasonable degree of horse spirit is as strong and often as vicious as a mature bull and when cornered in a stall for the beginning of his training is liable to injure himself as well as his would be trainers. Too many horses have their dispositions permanently injured by this kind of treatment. It is absolutely necessary to use considerable force under such circumstances, while better results might have been secured in the foal's young days by petting and coaxing and a slight degree of firmness.

The foal that is thoroughly halter trained when young will never forget his lessons.

DEMAND FOR HORSES.

What Wisconsin Is Doing to Encourage the Raising of Draft Animals.

"There is a strong demand for horses of size and quality that can stand the constant strain of heavy hauling over city pavements."

This is the way James G. Fuller, secretary of the Wisconsin Horse Breeders' association, sized up the situation the other day when asked about the future of horse raising in the state.

"Many farmers," he added, "are helping to supply this demand by raising horses which meet the market requirements and for which the buyers are willing to pay the best prices."

"For the purpose of encouraging the young men of the state to raise more and better horses we have been breeding up studs of Clydesdales and Percherons at the experiment station farm in Madison. Starting in a very small way, we have gradually built up representative studs of each breed. Recently, to still further improve our breeding stock, we added the superior Percheron brood mare, Koactive which was sired by a government owned stallion in France."

Skim milk For Pigs.

It is usually estimated that 100 pounds of skim milk are worth as much as a half bushel of corn for feeding purposes—that is, if corn is 60 cents a bushel, 100 pounds of skim milk are worth 30 cents. In feeding pigs give three pounds of skim milk to one pound of grain. Skim milk contains 2.0 per cent protein, 5.3 per cent carbohydrates and about .2 per cent fat. It is practically all digestible.

Castrating Lambs.

Lambs at this season should be castrated on a cool day or, say, on a damp, chilly morning. When warm the muscles of the abdomen become limp and yielding and are easily torn so as to allow the intestines to protrude. The capturing of lambs by castration on hot days is not at all uncommon. Learn to avoid this, but if the accident happens sew up the incision or tie off same way that one ties up a sack of grain, being careful first to have replaced the intestines.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

Methylene Blue Treatment Not Generally Approved.

The veterinary profession throughout the country is much stirred up over a preliminary bulletin of the Vermont station pointing out the high value of methylene blue as a preventive of contagious abortion, says the American Agriculturist. Only occasionally does one agree with Dr. Rich of Vermont that it is the best agent to use against the disease. Several of the profession are decidedly against it, declaring it not as good as carbolic acid solution. The majority are noncommittal, but cannot resist stating the Vermont station acted unwisely printing anything before all the facts were known.

The much discussed bulletin reported upon ninety-two cows in different herds which had previously aborted. Half of these were given the so called continuous treatment of methylene blue and the balance the interrupted treatment. The former method continued for five weeks, and the latter were weekly treatments with intervals of thirty to forty-five days in which no blue was administered. In the interrupted treatment a cheaper grade of blue was used, and the college reports this was a mistake as the medicinal grade is none too good. When the bulletin was published only fifty-seven of the ninety-two cows were reported upon, and of these fifty-six calved at full time and the other aborted. Of the thirty-five not mentioned in the bulletin thirty-one calved at full time, three aborted and one proved not to be with calf.

Scours In Horses.

Give the horse a pint of raw linseed oil once a day for three consecutive days. Follow this with a tablespoonful twice daily of following tonic powder: Salt, one pound; iron sulphate, two ounces; powdered nux vomica, two ounces; powdered gentian, two ounces; powdered ginger, two ounces. Stop feeding corn fodder if it is the least bit moldy or musty. Limit the hay to one pound per hundred pounds live weight daily. Two pounds of bran and one pound of linseed meal fed along with corn is a good ration.—National Stockman.

Sashes and girdles are as important this season as cuffs and collars in completing of a modish costume. Bizarre indeed, but oddly smart, a sash of pink ribbon edged with black monkey fur, worn in one of the fashionable New York restaurants.

The fringe of black monkey fur is the only dark touch in the costume which was of shell pink pussy will silk, with a bodice of chiffon over it.

The wide girdle of pink satin ribbon drew in the soft bodice in basque effect above and below the waist and the fringe of monkey fur falling on the hip. Ribbons play an important part in sashdom this season, although one sees also many handsome girdles and sashes of plain and plaided pure willow taffeta and of moire silk. Chiffon and mirror velvets are also made into rich sashes for wear with afternoon frocks. Velvet is not correct for morning wear. These velvet sashes usually have but one end at the back hanging from a flat bow or a covered buckle, and a silk tassel weights the sash end.

Very clever is a boned girdle inches wide, with a pointed extension below, which—donned over a bodice the same color and material—gives the effect of a fitted basque. These girdles come in black, navy, brown and grey pussy willow taffeta, and by their use a simple blouse of matching fabric turned into a very smart basque. The girdle snap fastens at the front. The boning holding it puckers smoothly over the figure above and below the natural waist line. Below the pucker fall the shaped, hemmed basque sections.

The long waisted gown with wide belt which is illustrated here is a very popular fall model. It is carried over in nocturne blue satin, with satin covered ball buttons and a touch of braiding on the front of the belt. The skirt and very full plaited tunic with row of buttons on the front are very modish.

KEEPING FLOWERS FRESH

To keep flowers before arranging them in the vases arrange loosely in large bowl brimful of water, allow the water to come just under the blossoms, and place in a dark place for an hour or so. This plan will stiffen blossoms and increase the length of time the flowers will keep in a fresh state.

It is interesting to note that cut flowers quickly lose their color if deprived of sunshine. Therefore if used as a table decoration the best plan is to put them in the window between times.

Valuable Hints For Those Learning to Play the Game.

MASTERY OF RULES NEEDED.

Grounding in the Elements an Important Point For the Beginner—To Become Expert One Must Combine Theory With Technical Skill.

Women players of golf, especially beginners, are inclined to swing the club so far around that they are thrown off their balance and the club swings the woman instead of the woman the club, says a writer in the Outlook. This fault can be corrected by keeping a tight grip on the club at all times during the swing, as it is the loosened hold that allows the head of the club to drop too near the ground. In the drive, which requires the fullest swing of any of the strokes except perhaps the brassie shot, the shaft of the club at the top of the swing should not go beyond the horizontal.

There is another point that women players, even experienced ones, are apt to neglect, and that is the rules of the game. There have been many matches in which players have been disqualified through the unconscious disregard or breaking of some rule. A book of general rules can be purchased at any place where golf clubs are sold, and the local or ground rules of each club are printed on the score cards of that club, so there is no excuse for any one being in a state of ignorance.

If there is any short cut to learning golf it is through careful study of the reasons for everything. Once the principles of the strokes are mastered a few months of regular and intelligent practice will make any able-bodied woman a fair player, but years of practice without scientific knowledge of the game will bring very uncertain results. A woman who seriously desires to become a really good player must curb her desire to go out and whack the ball along. Before she ever makes a complete round of the links she should study the peculiarities of each club, how to stand when using it, how to address the ball with it, how to swing it and what to expect of the ball once the stroke is made. After she has mastered these essentials and practiced with each club separately at suitable locations on the links she may piece together all she has learned and play a whole game, but not before.

It is possible and perfectly permissible to wriggle the feet from side to side until they are comfortably and firmly settled. This may seem rather an unimportant suggestion, but it is next to impossible to keep the body from swaying either sideways or forward unless a firm base is established, and if the body sways the accuracy of the stroke is gone.

Women are rather inclined to walk up to the ball and hit it without taking the time to arrange themselves properly. After all, only a fraction of a minute is required to find the best possible position, and the habit once acquired becomes practically automatic.

A simple way to test eggs is said to be to make a brine by dissolving two ounces of salt in one pint of water. Place the eggs in this. An egg three days old will float just under the surface, and an older egg will float on or above the surface.

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives'. Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, 'I am taking Fruit-a-tives'. He said, 'Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can'.

A PLEA FOR FATHER.

A Well Known Writer Presents His Case Tellingly.

Albert Payson Terhune makes a plea for the much abused father of the family in his article in the Pictorial Review, entitled "A Halo For Father."

It was at a vaudeville show. Vaudeville shows reflect the soul of the man in the street; not his brain—his soul—the thing he feels with. A damsel with a furry voice was singing a sobful ditty. Its refrain ran much like this: Take good care of mother, lad, when I'm dead and gone!

Be good to her and shield her from all pain. Revere her silvery head, For after she is dead You will never know a mother's love again.

From the gallery arose audible sniffs, amid the whirlwind of applause. Even in the self contained orchestra section more than one white handkerchief frisked.

Every one there had had a mother, strangely enough.

The next act was a comedy sketch, during which two weirdly appareled men sang in unison a song with the ensuing refrain:

Dad, dad, dad, The poor old worthless geezer! The fuss we've had With that old patience teaser. He lacks the spirit of a mouse. 'Most any one can down him. We let him hang around the house— It's cheaper than to drown him.

Again emotion swept the gallery, this time in the form of unextinguishable laughter—the laugh on dad.

"I wonder," suggested a born fool after the show, "what would have happened if they'd switched the sentiment on those two deathless lyrics, if they'd sung sobbily about father's silvery head and the angels whispering blessings to him and then if they'd called mother a 'worthless geezer' and said they let her hang around the house because it was cheaper than to drown her!"

No one answered the born fool, not even according to his folly, largely because every one knew just what would have happened in such an impossible case as the shifting of the two songs.

The audience at first mention of father in the transposed lyric would have begun to chuckle. And before two lines of the denatured mother song could have been delivered the hissing would have led to something like a riot. That is the answer.

Why in vaudeville, which is a mirror, distorted if you like, of life and of life's opinions, is mother a signal for handkerchiefs and father for howls? Why in plays, in books, in real life, is there a halo around mother's head, while father goes haloless to the grave?

Audiences, book and theatrical, are prepared to accept willingly and naturally the cruel father, the demon father, the clown father. He is part of their daily literary and dramatic diet. They swallow him with ease. He is predigested.

What would they do if the cruel mother, the demon mother, the comic

A Genius For Friendship.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer presents as a character in her story a botanist who gives the following advice to a young woman who is an amateur painter of ordinary ability:

"There are thousands of young women who can paint as well or better, but you are the one out of a thousand who has the gift of inspiring other people. You lift work from drudgery and vivify with your enthusiasm. The gift belongs only to a nature that is genuine, unspoiled and altogether unselfish. Stay yourself, child. Make the life work of many gladder and saner and truer because of their contact with you. You have a genius for friendship. Trust me, it is rarer than a genius for literature or art."

Odors In the Icebox.

The question of odors is a difficult one to deal with. So many housekeepers complain that, no matter how careful they may be, there is always a little odor in the refrigerator. Be careful of the food you put in. For instance, cucumbers have a very decided and penetrating odor, and there is nothing worse than a cantaloupe to "smell up" an icebox. If there is no cool closet or window box available, put the odorous foods into cracked ice for a short time before serving and they may be made deliciously cold.

Glass Covered Doilies.

Very attractive are the stands made of two thin rounds of glass with a lace doily between and bound together with gold galloon. They are designed to put under the flower vase, so if it sweats it will not damage the polished table beneath. They are dainty in appearance and may be had in two sizes.

USEFUL SHELVES.

In Kitchen and Cellar They Are Everyday Essentials.

In the kitchen a wall shelf is convenient for the clock or a neat row of spice boxes. Quaint little delft china receptacles come on shelves built especially to accommodate them, and these are both useful and ornamental in a blue and white kitchen.

No cellar is complete without a hanging shelf swung on chains or wooden supports from the rafters. Safely out of the way of mice, such a shelf is convenient for preserves or fruit or for storing large bundles. In the cellarway there is room for an additional shelf to hold the necessary bottles of blue, ammonia and the like, and outside the kitchen door a series of shelves will be found convenient for clothesline, buckets and the like. If these shelves can be made into a closet with a door all the better.

The Chaise Lounge Convenient For an Afternoon Nap.

For the sun parlor there is no more appropriate and comfortable piece of furniture than a chaise lounge, where the afternoon nap can be taken in peace.

Chaises can be had at many prices. Sometimes their wide arms are supplied with rings just big enough to hold a glass of lemonade or iced tea. Sometimes they are in the form of baskets for magazines and books.

Sometimes they are wide to support your arms and hands. They are always comfortable. One of very good workmanship and material costs about $28.50, stained and fitted with cretonne cushions. This chair is made of willow.

A much cheaper chair is one of bamboo poles, bound with varnished split willow. This sort of chair costs only about $10 and is by no means so durable as the other. But it is comfortable and attractive.

Saturday Night Fun.

Saturday night and tub time done! This is the end of a week of fun. But while we sit in our great big chair, cozy and warm by the firelight's glare, let's talk of the games we had each day, as the long week rolled itself away. Do you remember blind man's bluff? We seemed unable to laugh enough. And puss in the corner—that was fine; I liked it best when the turn was mine. To stand in the middle as puss, you see, and catch whoever was passing me. Then hide and seek! Did you like that more?

When you opened the cupboard behind the door And hid yourself so well that none Could find you at all till the game was done?

Yes, yes! I think that hide and seek Was the best, best game in all the week. But hark to the clock! It is time for bed! "Come, eat your suppers, and go!" It said. So now, goodby to the fire so bright. Goodby to the week on Saturday night. We go quite happy, as all should do. Who'd wake up happy on Sunday too. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Paul Schtagne, an electrician with the Bell Telephone company was in Napanee a few days ago, and while at a local hotel he was pointed out as a German. Instead, he took off his coat and offered to settle matters with everybody in the hotel, one at a time. Queensbury rules to govern, but the men who had put such a grave charge against him fell down. The story of the affair reached home before him, in this little role, and Paul and his many friends are now having a great laugh over the incident.—Whig.

RESIDENCE BURNED.

Friday evening of last week about 10 o'clock fire completely destroyed the residence of Mrs. Joseph Woodcock located in North Fredericksburgh just south of Napanee. The house and contents were a complete loss, with a very small insurance. When the fire was first noticed it had gained such headway that it was impossible to save even the contents. How the fire started is a mystery, because since the death of Mr. Woodcock no one has resided there. Mrs. Woodcock living with her son, a short distance from the homestead. However, a tramp is supposed to have caused the fire, as there was every indication that some one had been sleeping in the hay loft of the barn adjacent, also that on a previous visit to the house by the owner there was evidence that someone had occupied the bedroom located in the eastern part of the house, and residents who discovered the fire say that it was in that portion of the house that the fire evidently started. On the afternoon of the fire a tramp had been in that neighborhood and made himself objectionable by asking for money. Much sympathy is expressed for Mrs. Woodcock in her unfortunate loss.

N.C.I. Sports at Picton.

On Saturday last the return games with the Picton Collegiate Institute teams were played at the latter town and as usual the team from Napanee Collegiate Institute emerged victorious, having won two games, tied one and lost one. The day was all that could be desired and better football weather could not be wished for. The steamer "Lamonde" was chartered for the excursion and reached Picton at 10.15 a.m. On arrival in Picton the junior games were commenced, the junior football at the fair grounds and the junior basketball at the Picton Collegiate Institute's fine gymnasium. There was a strong wind blowing down the field making it difficult to dribble or pass the ball. Both teams scored in the first half and the N. C. I. lads had the ball in the Picton goal on two different occasions, but great stops by the P. C. I. goaler, saved the day for Picton. Both teams were unable to score in the second half and it was decided by the captains to play five minutes each way. In the last minute of play the N.C.I. lads worked the ball down to the Picton goal. VanLuven shot but the ball sailed over the corner of the bar. The game ended with the score, one each. The junior basketball match resulted in an easy victory for the P. C. I. girls. At the end of the first half the score stood 7-0 favor of P. C. I. In the second half the N. C. I. played better and had a margin of the play—P. C. I. scored 8 points, while N. C. I. scored 7, and the game ended with score 15-7, favor of Picton. The senior basketball match was played in the afternoon at the Collegiate Institute and resulted in a win for the blue-yellow-blue girls by the score of 13-6. A large crowd of spectators witnessed the game and the game took added interest, by the cheering of both team. The N.C.I. supporters, or what there were of them, were given plenty of opportunity to cheer and they responded in fine style. The N.C.I. girls were the aggressors from the blow of the whistle and emerged with the big end of the score in each half. The senior football match was played in the fair grounds before a fair-sized crowd. Napanee had the wind against them the first half and succeeded in scoring both goals in this half, Spencer and Wartman doing the scoring. They had several close shots on goal, but the P. C. I. goaler made some good stops. In the second half, the game lagged and although the N. C. I. boys had the best of the play, their own goal was in danger on one or two occasions and only the good work of Soby and Sills saved the N.C.I. from being scored upon. The game ended with score 2-0 favor N. C. I. The scores on the round both in Napanee and Picton are as follows:

resided. Mr. Garbutt was seventy-owing to heart disease, which necessitated him retiring from business. To Trinity Church Notes.

A very large attendance was present at the communion service last Sunday morning. A number of new members united with the Church by letter.
The Young People's Association held a very interesting "Halloween" entertainment on Monday evening. Rev.
Dr. Ryckman, of Kingston, who preaches in Trinity church next Sunday, is one of the most remarkable man of Canadian Methodism. He is 84 years of age and yet to all appearance is as active and vigorous as a young man could be. For many years he has been a leader in the Church.
Though superannuated, he holds a place on the various Church courts.
He is a preacher of far more than average ability. Do not fail to hear
"the old man eloquent" on Sunday

Soldiers Send Off.

Tuesday morning the volunteers from this county for Canada's second contingent left on the 11.49 train for Kingston, where they will go into camp to be drilled. The volunteers, and a large encourse of citizens, headed by the Citizens' Band marched to the station. While waiting for the train, which was somewhat late, the band played several patriotic selections. Before the arrival of the train a large number of our citizens, their numbers filling the station platform from end to end, had gathered to give the soldiers a send off and to extend to them the best of good wishes. As the train was leaving three rousing cheers were given, and the band played
"God Save the King." One of our most loyal and patriotic citizens was overheard to remark to Mr. Frank Ford, one of the volunteers, that if he brought back a German helmet he would make him a present of $100. It is needless to say that "Frank" who is an experienced and able soldier, will have a try for the one hundred.

TO ARREST GERMANS.

75 Pounds Dynamite said to have Been Seized in City.

Arrangements are completed, it is declared, for the arrest of 16 Germans said to be concerned in the plot to blow up the Welland Canal and the C.P.R. tunnel at Hamilton.
The information which led to preparations for the arrest of the suspects was furnished, it is stated, by four Washington officers, Messrs. Walsh, Patridge, Hunter and Williams, who have been in Toronto for some weeks and who co-operated with two officers from Ottawa. The investigations are said to have revealed the fact that plans for the destruction of both canal and tunnel had been prepared at the residences of three Toronto Germans. The officers are said to have discovered 75 pounds of dynamite in the residence of an east end
German, also a complete set of plans.
It was further stated that over 300 pounds of dynamite had been discovered in close proximity to the canal.

The meetings of the three men and 13 compatriots are alleged to have taken place over a store in the north end of the city.
